Million Trees!

LINCOLN—Orders for Clarke-McNary trees for planting in 1963 have passed the million mark, Karl Loerch, University of Nebraska Extension Forester reported Monday.

"This is well ahead of the normal number of trees ordered by the first of March," the forester said.

"A good supply of top quality planting stock coupled with apparent increased interest in tree planting indicate that 1963 might well be another record year for planting trees in Nebraska."

"A large percentage of the orders are usually received during March and April with the actual distribution beginning in early April and continuing throughout the month," Loerch said. "Orders are normally accepted until Arbor Day in Nebraska which is April 22, depending upon the availability of trees."

Evergreen species still in good supply include red cedar and ponderosa pine, the two most often used for windbreak plantings in the State. Austrian, Scotch, and white pine, Douglas-Fir and Colorado Blue Spruce are available in limited quantities primarily for use in Christmas tree plantings.

Shrub species still available include American plum, honeysuckle, lilac, and cotoneaster which are well suited for use in windbreaks. Others which are ideal for planting for wildlife protection and food include multi-flora rose, Hansen's hybrid rose, Sweetbrier, three-leaved sumac, choke cherry, Nanking cherry, and sand cherry.

Broadleaf species that provide early height growth for windbreaks include such trees as Chinese elm, cottonwood, honeylocust, hackberry, and green ash.

Prices for Clarke-McNary trees are as follows: broadleaf species, $3 per hundred; shrubs, $4.50 per hundred; evergreens for wind-break purposes, $5 per hundred; and Christmas tree species, $8 per hundred. Also available are stratified black walnut seeds at $2 per hundred.

Persons interested in ordering trees may obtain a copy of E. C. 1726, "Application Blank and Information on Clarke-McNary Trees," at University County Extension Offices throughout Nebraska.
