Weed Control

The use of chemicals has proven to be a very effective way of controlling weeds in windbreaks and other tree plantings, reports Karl Loerch, University of Nebraska Extension Forester.

Control of weeds and grasses is necessary for survival and growth of tree plantings. Soil sterilant herbicides such as simazin and diuron which control weeds for a growing season with one application, without injuring the trees, will eliminate the need for a lot of hard work.

Tree plantings may be treated at the time of planting or before weeds reach the two-leaf stage using 4 lbs. of active chemical per acre. The herbicide should be applied in bands 3 to 4 feet wide down the tree row. The surface of the soil should be smooth and firm, and free of trash.

The rate of application should be cut in half when the planting is in sandy soil or when the following species are involved: American Elm, Siberian Elm, Hackberry, Russian Olive and boxelder.

For additional information obtain a copy of E.C. 60-1733 "Chemical Weed Control in Windbreaks" from your University County Extension Agent, at Weeping Water.

Remember: It's Raining Violets!

Although it isn't April, many people no doubt have thoughts of Spring these days and today's weather, including snow, sleet, rain, slush, overcast and cool temperatures, did little to raise the spirits.

But, the song gives this advice: "have no regrets . . . it isn't raining rain, you know, it's raining violets."

Enjoy your violets. Temperatures here ranged from 19.5 to 48.4 over the weekend, the high occurring at 6:45 p.m. Saturday.

Snow fell during the night but it was warm enough so that it melted from streets and sidewalks.

The outlook was for clouds, wind and an end of precipitation.
