Goldenrod Study Group Has Program On Oil Painting
Pictures were exhibited and techniques of oil painting were explained to the Goldenrod Study Club March 14 at the Gas Company's Blue Flame rooms. The program was presented by Mrs. Jack Troop who recently completed an 18 week course in oil-painting at the University of Omaha. Color slides of art work from the University were shown by Mrs. Troop. She exhibited oil portraits of the Troop children, grandmother Troop, scenes around the farm home and still life paintings she had completed. The use of initial materials, the mounting of canvas for a picture, outlining by charcoal, and blending of colors for highlighting effects were demonstrated. Colors are not important used alone, but only as they are used with colors to create harmony of a picture, she explained. Because oil is opaque and water is transparent, oil is the easier medium for painting. White is used more than any one color to obtain shading. Some painters prefer to use only the palette knife instead of a brush in applying oil paint to a picture, members were told. In conclusion, Mrs. Troop improvised easels and provided materials for members who experimented with oil painting. Donations from the club treasury were made of $5 for the Red Cross and $5 for the Nebraska Children's Home at the business session. Hostesses were Mrs. Charles Spangler, Mrs. Jack Troop and Mrs. Richard Spangler. Mrs. Henry Kaftenberger was a guest and fourteen members were present. The April meeting will be held at the home of Ellen Spangler in Omaha. Guest speaker will be from the Omaha office of Mental Health.
