

Information Sought Relating To Proposed Dam on Creek

NEHAWKA—A group of persons met here Thursday to discuss the question of flood control on Weeping Water Creek.

Dr. R. R. Anderson was appointed temporary chairman.

Main topic was damage to Nehawka and to property owners along the creek valley leading to the Missouri River.

A dam has been proposed on the creek about two miles west of Nehawka. DeForest Brown of Weeping Water, who has done considerable research on the project, gave information on the proposal to the group.

Committees were appointed for the Nehawka and Union areas to contact all people in the area and advise them of information needed.

Another meeting of the committees is planned for March 21 in Nehawka, with the intention of consolidating information and making preparations for a general meeting with the U. S. Engineers.

COMMENT

by L. A. Caldwell
ATTICS

The first day of Spring used to be the time to think about cleaning out the attic. But one of the things modern architects seem to have dispensed with in many new homes is the attic. It doesn't accomplish any useful function, and it wastes space.

Most of us grew up in homes which had an attic. If had to be cleaned out every Spring... a process which took a lot longer than it should have. Remember why? There were a lot of places to pause in an attic. Like the aging mind, it was full of memories.

Here in the attic you would run across that dance program with the half-forgotten names... or the carefully packed away tuxedo or party dress. Here you would find the box of old snapshots never put into an album... or the diary you used to keep with its dreams, its wild enthusiasms, its confidences. And here, tied with a pocket of string or ribbon, a bundle of letters, written by that stranger of long ago... you. Where are such memories stored, in a house without an attic?
