AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE TO EVERY NEBRASKA CORN GROWER

Before you buy a rootworm insecticide... be safe, be sure and consider all the facts

You will hear many conflicting claims for rootworm insecticides this year. In the interest of presenting all the facts that you need to make your decision, we feel obligated to bring you this message. Read the information on these pages carefully, study it, evaluate it, discuss it... Then make your decision.

Here are the reasons why you should use Diazinon to control resistant corn rootworm DIAZINON... Safe to your corn seed. The only insecticide recommended for resistant corn rootworm control that is safe to corn, even when in direct contact with the seed.

DIAZINON... Not taken up by the corn plant. The only insecticide recommended for resistant corn rootworm control that is not taken up by the plant.

DIAZINON... Available in fertilizer mixtures. The only insecticide recommended for resistant corn rootworm control that has been made available in fertilizer mixtures.

DIAZINON... Safe to use—easy to apply—no protective clothing required. The only insecticide recommended for resistant corn rootworm control that is not classified as highly toxic by the United States Public Health Service. In fact, Diazinon is listed as being less toxic through skin absorption than previously recommended soil insecticides for rootworm control.

DIAZINON 10G FOR CORN ROOTWORM CONTROL
Widespread field experience on hundreds of thousands of acres by farmers in 1962 has proved that Diazinon 10G will give you positive control of resistant and non-resistant corn rootworm. This free-flowing quality granular material is easy to apply. After application, the granules begin a slow release of Diazinon insecticide in the soil to give you sure, long-lasting control of the troublesome, destructive corn rootworms. Millions of dollars were lost to corn rootworm damage by farmers who gambled with ineffective control methods in 1962. Don't take a chance with your corn crop in 1963. Control resistant corn rootworm—get top yields. Use the field-proved safe soil insecticide... DIAZINON.

Diazinon is safe to use:

It is the only insecticide recommended for control of resistant corn rootworms that is not included in the "highly toxic" list published in U.S. Public Health Service Publication No. 772, Part II, page II-5. This same publication also shows Diazinon as less toxic through skin absorption than some of the soil insecticides most commonly used for corn rootworm control before resistance developed. In addition to this important safety aspect, there is the advantage of convenience when you use Diazinon, because no special protective devices and clothing are required.

Diazinon is safe to corn seed:

It is the only insecticide recommended for control of resistant corn rootworm that is safe when in direct contact with the seed. This unique and outstanding safety factor relieves you of the worry of possible loss of stand due to chemical injury to the seed.
