Yard Lights For Farms Are Popular

LINCOLN—Specially designed outside lights are becoming popular as farm yard lights, says M. L. Munggaard, University of Nebraska Extension agricultural engineer.

Proper Placement Of Starter Fertilizer Vital

LINCOLN—Liquid mixed fertilizer that is applied with a lister or planter attachment as a starter for corn or milo, should be placed 1 to 2 inches to the side of the seed row. In addition, it should be placed at least as deep or slightly deeper than the seed for best results.

This is the same placement recommended for solid (dry) starter fertilizers, according to Clinton Hoover, University of Nebraska Extension agronomist.

The phosphorus in liquid fertilizers will not move significantly more in the soil than will the phosphorus in solid fertilizers. In both cases, the fertilizer must be placed at a depth where the young plant roots can reach it to be used most effectively.

It also is risky to allow liquid mixed fertilizer to come in contact with the seed, just as it is with solid mixed fertilizers. Damage to seed germination and young seedlings can occur from fertilizer-seed contact, particularly when the soil is dry at planting time and remains dry for a week or more following planting. Placement of starter fertilizer (liquid or solid) in such a manner that the fertilizer either comes in contact with the seed or is placed in an area above the seed row, is much less effective and is not recommended.

Mixed fertilizer solutions are fully equal to solid mixed fertilizers of equal available phosphate content for starter application on phosphorus deficient soils, according to Hoover.

Bobwhite Whistles Also Evidence of Early Spring!

LINCOLN — All indications point to a spring substantially ahead of last year. The growth of winter wheat, bobwhite whistles and pheasant nesting are some of the more obvious signs of spring to the field men of the Game Commission.

Carl Wolfe, pheasant researcher from Sutton, has reported that pheasant nesting activity is considerably ahead of last year on the study areas in the south-central part of the state.

Normally, an early pheasant hatching peak is associated with better chick production than a late hatching peak. The Game Commission will be watching with more than casual interest to see if the early spring means better pheasant production.

At the present time, it is a little early to start counting the chicks since most of the eggs have not been laid yet, game technicians said.

Bobwhite quail have been rushing the season by giving their familiar "bob-white" call. Usually quail do not start whistling until later in the spring.

'War Orphan' Aid Peak Seen

The peak of the Veterans Administration program providing educational and training assistance to "war orphans" is expected to be reached this year, a long range VA survey showed today.

A. H. Duxbury, VA Regional Office Manager, said it is estimated that nearly 250 children in Nebraska whose veteran-parent died of a service-connected disability will take advantage of this VA benefit during 1963.

Called "orphans" even though one parent is still living, these eligible children must be between 18 and 23 years of age. They must have a high school diploma or enter a trade school, not requiring a high school diploma. They may marry without losing eligibility. They may receive up to 36 months of schooling with the VA paying an allowance of $110 a month for each month they are in school.

Duxbury added they will be given vocational counselling to help them select a goal and the proper courses leading to that goal.

He advised those who are eligible for this educational program to contact the VA Regional Office in Lincoln, or any County or Post Service Officer for additional information.
