Picnic Fare Is Plentiful

LINCOLN — For economical eating — outdoors or in — pick from the abundance of picnic-type foods in the markets now, suggests Kathryn Cooley, Extension foods and nutrition specialist at the University of Nebraska.

"Turkeys can fill the bill for either type of meal. These birds are no longer restricted to winter feasts. They can be turned into family-pleasing entrees any time of the year. Try a cool turkey salad some sultry day, or barbecue a bird for a special celebration," the specialist says.

This summer's crop of watermelon is expected to be bigger than average and peaches are forecast as coming to the market in far-above-average numbers. Popular fresh peaches make any meal special — adding bright color and flavor at breakfast, lunch or dinner, or in cereal, salads or desserts, according to Miss Cooley.

Watch Out for Kids' Choice of 'Refreshments'

LINCOLN — Parents should be particularly careful during the summer months to keep liquid household specialties, chemicals and medicines out of the reach of young children, a University of Nebraska specialist warns.

Children are especially tempted to drink any liquids they find around the house during hot weather, because they are thirsty, explains Mrs. Clara N. Leopold, Extension home management specialist.

Household cleaning fluids, carbon tetrachloride, furniture polish, paint remover, permanent wave solutions, nail remover, and shampoos — these are just a few of the items under the sink or in the medicine chest that have caused illness among children, according to Mrs. Leopold.

Knowledge of preventive measures is more effective than the wide dissemination of information on dangerous chemicals and available methods of treatment, once the chemicals are taken into the body, the specialist points out.

"Keep products that are not used for eating and drinking well out of children's reach, and don't forget that at some ages, children show considerable skill and energy in climbing to heights not attempted before. Children will drink almost anything, regardless of taste or smell," Mrs. Leopold stressed.

Nylon Zippers

LINCOLN — "For years homemakers used metal chain zippers and were satisfied with them. Recently, however, the nylon coil zipper has become popular," says Anna Marie Kriefels, Extension clothing and textiles specialist at the University of Nebraska.

"Most new products are invented because manufacturers want to please the consumer. In this case women wanted zippers which were more inconspicuous and lighter in weight. They wanted a zipper warm to the touch, flexible and strong and one which wouldn't snag or damage fabric," the University specialist points out.

Nylon coil zippers have distinct advantages. Miss Kriefels continued. If fabric is caught in a nylon zipper, the coil can be bent crosswise and twisted open to release the fabric. Nylon coils can be dyed at the same time the zipper tape is dyed, resulting in a uniform and permanent color. Flexibility, lightness in weight and comfort in wearing are other features of the nylon zipper, Miss Kriefels pointed out.

"Nylon zippers can be laundered and dry cleaned. They aren't affected by soaps, detergents, dry cleaning, fabric softening solutions or heat of automatic dryers," the specialist noted.

All types of zippers should be closed before washing, cleaning or pressing. The heat of an iron set for synthetic fabrics or at steam should not damage the nylon coil, the specialist concluded.

Wheat Program

In response to questions raised since the Wheat Quota Referendum on May 21, Ivan G. Alt-house, chairman, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee, today reviewed certain Wheat Program provisions still in effect under existing law.

For 1964, the chairman explained, the legislation provides that price-support at 80 per cent of Parity — About $1.25 per bushel, on the average — will be available to producers who plant within the acreage allotments which were established before the Referendum.

There will be no quota penalties for planting in excess of 1964 acreage allotments. However, overplanting the 1964 allotments would reduce the acreage history credit for future allotments.

COMMENT
by L. A. Caldwell
THE LIVING LANGUAGE
If a hundred-odd years ago, a poet had written something like, "I will always love you, truly, in every month including July," no one would have laughed. "Truly" and "July" made a perfect rhyme, for the accent was on the syllable in both words. Just, of course, was named after Julius Caesar, and it is only in modern times that we have got away from pronouncing it like "Julius."
Language is never static. It is always changing. And it is interesting to observe that, in the long run, it is not the professors of English who produce most of the changes, but the average citizen.
Many words change simply because the average person tends to take the easy way out. If a word is hard to pronounce, most of us will unconsciously drop a letter or even a syllable when we use the word. In the end, over scores or hundreds of years, the word changes, adapting itself to our speech habits. That's one of the few cases in life where laziness eventually wins.

This is ALL That Gets Hot

When You Cook Electrically
An electric range keeps your kitchen—and you—springtime cool. Flameless electric cooking units fit snugly against pan bottoms—put their heat into food preparation, not into kitchen air. There's less heat for your air conditioner to remove, too. Make sure you enjoy cooking even in the summertime! See your favorite electric appliance dealer soon for a flameless electric range.
