St. Louis, S. D. There are twelve grandchildren in the family. Four of the grandsons are presently in the service. They have 14 Great-grandchildren.

The Shraders have been active in the county for many years. With the exception of eight years at Alma just after their marriage, they have always resided here.

The charming white farm house north of Nehawka where they now live was built by Lester's parents about 1870. The frame of the barn is put together with wooden pegs.

Mr. Shrader has reached several Masonic offices. He became Past Master in 1950 and Past Commander of Mount Zion Commandery No. 5, at Plattsmouth in 1954. In Eastern Star, he and his wife were Worthy Matron and Worthy Patron in 1959. Mr. Shrader was Worthy Patron until 1961, being patron during the terms of Doretta Hollenburger and Mrs. Ray Ehlers also.

Mr. Shrader, who had 8 brothers and sisters, is one of four still living. Others are, Eva Ford, Redfield, California; Fern Gish, Weeping Water; and George Shrader, Denver, Colo. Mrs. Shrader has a sister Amy Lindquist who lives in Moline, Ill.

But we who have not seen have heard and we can preserve the memory of people with the courage to make the "Great Amer-

COMMENT

by L. A. Caldwell
SMILING

All of us have noticed or had called to our attention the way in which a disturbance in a pond will cause ripples to extend all the way across, in ever-widening circles. Even a small stone will do it.

There are many human activities that will cause the same effect. One is a yawn. There is something about a yawn that is contagious. Maybe that's because boredom is catching. But another thing that has the same power is a smile.

Anytime someone smiles in a crowd, everyone reacts. One person may feel that he's being laughed at, and he'll check to make sure he wore the right tie or matching socks. Another will look embarrassed, and perhaps release the hand of the woman beside him. A third observer will find himself smiling too, without knowing just why. But the ripples will go through the whole crowd, and most of the people will feel a little better for it.
