New MDTA Course To Be Offered in 'Office Skills'

Aimed at developing general office skills so that unemployed persons with aptitudes and interests can qualify for clerical jobs which are in increasing demand a new MDTA training course is scheduled to start soon.

K. L. Ledbetter, Selection and Referral Interviewer of the Nebraska City Office of the Division of Employment said today that participation in this area in various types of training offered had been very good to date with one or more entrants in each course offered.

The new course in general office clerical work will be held in Omaha of 18 weeks duration. There will be no charge for the training and in some cases provision is made to assist the trainee with living expenses.

The course is under the Manpower Development and Training Act.

John F. Kennedy, President, visiting Germany.

LETTERBOX

Portland, Ore.
Aug. 15, 1963

Dear Editor:

Received my paper this A.M. Read what J. R. Schreiner has to say about parking meters. I fought them when I was Mayor of your city. Also fought changing Highway 73-75 away from the city. The people in Plattsmouth wanted it that way.

I tried hard to please everybody. The businessmen told me that I kept Plattsmouth cleaner than anyone had. The people in the City of Portland in what is called the Hollywood District petitioned the City and had the parking meters taken out of their district.

I cannot see why the small cities and towns want parking meters and run all their business into "shopping centers" where they have free parking. It doesn't make sense to me. I can see one-hour and two-hour parking signs. No meters.

I just had to write and say I go along with J. R. Schreiner, although I do not know the man. I have no property in Plattsmouth or interest except lots of friends and I love my old home town.

Yours truly,
Arnold J. Lillie,
Former Mayor of Plattsmouth, Portland, Ore.

Prizes Offered For Big Trees

LINCOLN—Two hundred trees will go to the people who find and report the largest tree of 10 species in Nebraska, The Extension Service, in cooperation with the Game Commission, is offering 200 young trees of the winners' choice as an incentive to people to assist in locating the top trees in the state.

A search launched last month by the two state agencies for the state's largest cottonwood prompted a flood of letters detailing not only large cottonwoods, but carrying information on other species. As a result, the search has been widened to include 10 species of trees.

The largest tree in Nebraska of the following species is being sought: cottonwood, American elm, hackberry, burr oak, black walnut, green ash, linden (basewood), honey locust, ponderosa pine, and red cedar.

Karl A. Loerch, extension forester, requested people submitting entries in the big tree search to supply the following information: species, girth, measured at a point 4 1/2 feet above ground level; height, an approximation will do; spread, and location as precise as possible.

The information should be sent to Trees, Game Commission, State Capitol, Lincoln 9. A member of the extension forester's office will check all outstanding entries.

"Although the contest is presently limited to the 10 species named," said Loerch, "another search will be started at the conclusion of this one for the largest individual tree of other species. Therefore, everyone is urged to keep an eye open for large trees of all types."

Tonnage of the six more important vegetable crops for processing this year in the U. S. is 21 per cent less than in 1962, based on August conditions. Production of summer vegetables for the fresh market is down two per cent from last year but two per cent above average, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.
