It's Good Time To Fix Machines For Next Year

LINCOLN — The off-season for field work is a good time to make the next crop season's job easier, according to Delbert E. Lane, University of Nebraska Extension agricultural engineer.

This can be done by inspecting, repairing, and protecting machinery before storing it for the winter, he said. The benefits of off-season care of machinery, he said, is that repairs can be made during the slack work period, there will be no last minute rush to get the machinery in shape for use when the next crop season arrives, and time is saved in putting the machinery back into operation.

All parts of the machines must be protected against corrosion. Lane advises farmers to check their operators manuals for the proper procedures. Oil and grease should be changed in engines, cooling systems cleaned and drained, fuel systems should be drained, crankcases and gear cases should be refilled with the right lubricant, the air cleaner serviced, several spoonfuls of oil should be put into each spark plug hole, and the engine turned over several times to distribute clean oil throughout.

Batteries should be removed, charged, and stored in a dry place. Engine opening should be sealed to keep out dirt and moisture. Belts should be removed or slacked off. The machine should be jacked up to take the weight off the tires.

The interiors of machines should be cleaned thoroughly, Lane said, because any dirt will collect moisture and cause corrosion.

Any tools that come in contact with the earth should be cleaned thoroughly and greased. Damaged sheet metal and frames should be repaired and painted.

Chains should be cleaned, repaired, greased, wrapped in a protective cover and stored inside. Canvas should be cleaned, rolled not too tightly and stored flat in a place where it will not need to be moved very often.

Metal that comes in contact with chemicals should be flushed thoroughly with water and the entire surface coated with light oil.

Look for Various 'Cuts' for Turkey

LINCOLN—Since the turkey parts were marketed a few years ago, the variety of turkey "packages" has increased considerably, according to Ethel Diederichsen, Extension foods and nutrition specialist at the University of Nebraska.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture says that half and quarter turkeys are the most popular in some localities. Disjointed pieces — legs, breasts, wings, necks and backs—are in demand so families can have turkey in small amounts any day of the year.

"Look for boneless turkey rolls, turkey meat loaf, turkey sausage, turkey dogs, mock turkey drumsticks, turkeyburgers, turkey steaks, frozen turkey parts and frozen turkey boil-in-the-bag meals," says Miss Diederichsen.

"Turkey steaks are a quick-and-easy-to-fix entree. Cross-cut steaks (slices of the bird with bone left in) braise into tasty arringtons, breaded or plain. Boneless steaks, made by 'cutting' together pieces of turkey, are very perishable and should be used quickly. If frozen, they should be cooked without thawing. Just brown in hot fat and serve, the specialist concluded.

Konrad Adenauer, retired Chancellor of West Germany, "Whenever you call upon me, I shall speak, but only when necessary. When one speaks to much, his words go unheeded."

"We urge everyone to support these important new programs of the March of Dimes," concluded Mrs. Strabel.

Support of 'March' Programs Urged by County Chairman

The March of Dimes now provides the largest single national source of private support for scientific research and patient care in both arthritis and birth defects, according to Mrs. Will Strabel.

Mrs. Strabel, Cass County Campaign Director made the statement on her return from Kansas City where she attended a meeting of volunteer leaders planning for the January, 1964 March of Dimes campaign. More than 250 delegates attended the two-day session at the President Hotel.

March of Dimes leadership in the fight against crippling birth defects and arthritis has been achieved in less than six years after the organization first turned its attention to them, Mrs. Strabel said.

She noted that experience gained in the successful fight against polio enabled the March of Dimes to move promptly ahead in treatment and research.

Now, she said, there are nearly 700 March of Dimes sponsored Clinical Study and Special Treatment Centers in operation across the nation providing improved treatment for victims of birth defects and arthritis.

"Until recently," said Mrs. Strabel, "such uniformly good care was difficult to obtain. Today, March of Dimes centers are closing the gap that exists between research findings in the laboratory and the application of new knowledge at the bedside of the patient."

Mrs. Strabel emphasized that the March of Dimes is also providing the highest level of support for outstanding scientists in the leading laboratories of the United States and other nations. This year, for example, nearly $7,500,000 will be devoted to a research program seeking to eliminate birth defects which strike more than 250,000 babies each year; and arthritis, which numbers its victims in the millions.

One aspect of this research program of particular interest to March of Dimes contributors, said Mrs. Strabel is the Salk Institute for Biological Studies. There, Dr. Jonas Salk and a team of world renowned scientists will soon begin studies of the most basic biological questions. The March of Dimes is aiding in the construction and support of the Institute.

"We urge everyone to support these important new programs of the March of Dimes," concluded Mrs. Strabel. "At the same time, we cannot forget the many thousands of disabled polio victims who still look to us for help. Your contributions will enable them to look to the future with hope."

'Meals on Run' Can Add Up to Poor Nutrition

LINCOLN—"I'm in a hurry," is the main reason given by many teen-agers for not eating a good meal properly, according to Kathryn Cooley, Extension foods and nutrition specialist at the University of Nebraska.

Miss Cooley cited findings of a study conducted by Dr. Evelyn Spindler of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Federal Extension Service. Dr. Spindler recently interviewed 75 teenagers to find out why they didn't eat better. Here's what she found:

—They got up too late for breakfast, had to catch a bus, spent too much time in dressing and make-up.

—They had only 30 minutes for lunch and sometimes meetings were crammed into the lunch period.

—They came home and had a quick snack after school, had to rush back before dinner for play practice, band rehearsal, football. After that, they ran out for a snack at the drug store or hamburger shop.

Meals on the run—plus self-inflicted diets—add up to poor nutrition, Miss Cooley warns.

This is particularly true of teen-age girls, food and health authorities agree. Boys require about 3,600 calories daily—about a third more than girls of the same age. And in eating more, boys usually get more nutrients. There's also some evidence that boys choose better foods than girls.

Dr. Spindler believes it's imperative that teen-age girls take a good long look at their diets. For every 10 girls, six of them are poorly nourished—that is, they get two-thirds or fewer of the nutrients recommended for their age group by the National Research Council.

The nutrients most commonly lacking in teen-age diets are calcium and vitamin C, along with iron.

Chicken's Best Served Very Hot or Cold

LINCOLN — Go to the extremes with chicken! Serve it plain or serve it extremely fancy, but be sure to serve chicken very hot or very cold, advises the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Research has shown that when chicken stands at room temperature, it begins to deteriorate and spoil. So, cooked chicken should be served promptly or refrigerated and served cold.

Leftover chicken and gravy, for the same reason, should be refrigerated or frozen in covered containers as soon as possible.

Stuffing should be removed and refrigerated separately.

Leftovers should be used within two or three days. Shoppers will do extremely well to choose from the abundance of broiler-fryers at food stores, says USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service. These tender, plump, young birds offer high quality protein at budget-wise prices.

You can go from one extreme to the other with tasty, tangy chicken-bleu cheese sandwiches. For a hearty, easy-to-fix family treat, combine a cup of diced chicken with a teaspoon of lemon juice and a tablespoon of mayonnaise.

Spread this mixture on buttered bread, split rolls, or muffins. Top with crumbled bleu cheese and broil until the cheese melts. Serve immediately. For a party, cut the bread into fancy shapes and serve as hot hors-d'oeuvres.
