... about Hunting ..

(One of a series "You and The Law," prepared by the Nebraska State Bar Association).

The ownership of game birds and game animals has long been held to be in the state in its sovereign capacity. "Game" in this connection generally means birds and beasts of a wild nature which are obtained by fowling and hunting.

A private person can acquire ownership of game only by reducing it to possession in a lawful manner. The state has the right and the power to enact those regulations which are necessary to protect the public's right in game birds and animals.

Our state has enacted numerous laws to protect game birds and animals. This is done by requiring a hunting license, fixing open seasons, fixing bag limits, and other laws designed to protect the public as well as the game.

A license to hunt does not permit the holder to hunt where and when he chooses. This is not a license to trespass. An owner does not have to post his property to keep hunters off of his land.

By posting his property according to law he then has the assistance of game wardens in keeping trespassers off his property. If his property is not posted then it is mainly his burden to keep trespassers off.

Laws regulating hunting are numerous. Some of the more important are those dealing with firearms. For instance, it is illegal to hunt birds with rifles, pistols, revolvers or swivel guns. Shotguns larger than ten gauge or those which hold more than three rounds cannot be used unless plugged.

Loaded shotguns cannot be carried in any vehicle on a public highway except as permitted by law. An obvious exception to this would be the carrying of a loaded shotgun by a police officer.

The question has been asked, "When is a gun unloaded?" The Attorney General states that a gun is unloaded when all shells are removed from the gun, both the magazine and the chamber.

Regulation of open seasons on birds and animals is made by the Game, Forestry and Parks Commission. All hunters should be familiar with these regulations.

Specific information on the hunting laws is contained in pamphlets which may be picked up locally from stores handling the sale of hunting licenses or from the Game Commission in the Capitol Building in Lincoln.

Gobblers Under Gun Nov. 9

LINCOLN — NEBRASKA wild turkeys had better start scurrying for cover, for they will come under the hunter's gun beginning November 9, the Game Commission reports.

The state's second season on Merriam's turkeys opens November 9 and will run through November 17. Special permits were issued to 1,000 gunners to try for the big birds this year in the Pine Ridge.

Although the gobblers were only introduced into the area early in 1959, their reproduction has been exceptional, M. O. Steen, Commission director, said.

The turkeys apparently like their new home, for the flock has grown to about 4,000 from an original release of 28 birds. The growth has enabled the Commission to double the number of turkey permits from 500 last season to 1,000 for 1963.

Turkey season will overlap the last two days of the statewide rifle deer season and this will give lucky hunters who hold both a deer and a turkey permit an opportunity to take part in both hunts without making separate trips.

Almost tame at the outset of a season, the gobblers soon wise up and it takes a clever hunter to bag one as the season draws to a close.

Shooting hours are from one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset. Either sex is legal game. Shotguns are the only legal firearms, with shot size Nos. 2 to 6 inclusive and the gauge 20 to 10 inclusive.

Since wild turkeys are classified as an upland game bird, an upland game bird stamp is required. It need not be attached to the special turkey permit.

Law also requires that turkeys be sealed at one of the official check stations located at the Harrison and Chadron courthouses, the Crawford police station, or with August Dorman at Rushville. Failure to have a bird sealed will constitute an illegal kill and subject the hunter to arrest.

Here Are Hints About Handling Of Pheasants

Keep pheasants cool and well-ventilated on their trip from the fields to home. Carriers mounted on the tops of cars are an excellent place to transport pheasants. Pheasants carried in the trunk of the car will result in wasted meat unless the trunk is very well ventilated. Cool air and good ventilation are the most important things to remember in transporting pheasants. Separate the birds to allow them to lose their body temperature as quickly as possible.

The age of pheasants may be determined by the spur. The spur, although present on a young bird, are neither long nor sharp; on an older bird, they are both long and sharp.

Allow one pheasant for two people when serving. A larger bird may serve at least three people.

Try plucking pheasants rather than skinning them for a change of flavor. Older birds which are not badly damaged will provide a different taste treat if plucked rather than skinned before being prepared. Another flavor is lost when the birds are skinned.

Have You Had Your Anticyclone Yet This Week?

What is an anticyclone? How often do they occur, and how fast do they move?

An anticyclone in this hemisphere is a high pressure area. They occur just about every week in the year. An anticyclone is the opposite of a cyclone, which is a low pressure area.

Winds in an anticyclone circle blow clockwise and bring with them fair weather. These circular areas, large or small, move several hundred miles a day, usually from west to east, or sometimes slightly to the southeast.

In the winter, they move along a little faster than in summer and might travel 600 to 700 miles a day, according to the experts who study their movements. More often than not, you will never refer to the high pressure areas which pass over you as anticyclones. Usage of the phrase "high pressure area" or just "high", has supplanted references to anticyclones.
