Tried to Rob a Street Car.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.: Friday night four men, led by Oscar Bridges, said to be a bridge and parachute jumper of more or less notoriety, made an unsuccessful attempt to hold up and rob an electric car filled with passengers bound for Independence. Bridges was arrested after a desperate tussle with the motorman. The other men escaped, but their names are known and it is believed they will be captured. When the car reached a lonely spot midway between the two cities, Bridges, snatched, jumped on the rear platform and going through the car to the front, boldly thrust his revolver at the breast of the motorman. Another of the gang who had quickly followed Bridges, and who wore a mask, had just entered the rear door and was in the act of ordering the passengers to hold up their hands when the conductor threw him from the car, which the motorman in some manner had been able to start. The two remaining robbers, who it appears were to cover the conductor, became frightened at the quick action displayed by him, and when the second robber alighted on the ground, they made off to the woods. The police gave out the men's names as Oscar Bridges, Eugene Ridgway, Ernest Ridgway and James Repine, all under 22 years of age. The Ridgway brothers live at Sheffield, a small suburb near the scene of the holdup. Repine, 21 years old, lives at Centropolis, a suburb of Kansas City.

They celebrated Thanksgiving day principally by drinking, and the tavern of Anthony Palley was their headquarters. As the day grew older and the miners grew drunker trouble began to brew. The shooting occurred about 3 o'clock in the morning. Palley, the tavernkeeper, says that a number of Poles were drinking in his place when a party of young Americans entered. After much drinking they began to taunt the foreigners. This led to a quarrel in which the Americans assumed the aggressive and set upon the Poles with canes. The first blow had no sooner been struck than the foreigners drew their guns and a battle began to fly. The Americans beat a retreat.

Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review.

NEW YORK: R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: When the rush of orders after election slackened many began to think business dwindling. Subsidence of deferred orders is not a new business. Wheat has risen over 6 cents for the week, without material change in foreign advices, which have been on the whole less stimulating. Corn has sympathized with wheat only a little and is coming in freely. The most important factor in the wheat market is that the visible supplies do not gain as much as had been expected. Wool has been and is still bought largely for speculation and early purchasers are unloading on the latter, but the mills are not yet doing much more than in October.

Weyler left Havana for the front two weeks ago, came Thursday by special messenger who stopped in this city. Gen. Maceo sends greeting to his countrymen in the United States and in a few words assures them and the friends of Cuba throughout the country that his gallant band is safe and able for a time at least to take care of itself, no matter what the Spaniards may do. The message is directed to the New York junta and reads: "We have withstood the enemy in many encounters and are prepared for any move he may make. We have rendered him much injury and will be able to withstand any of his attacks for some time to come. "Assure our noble friends in the United States that the cause of liberty will not suffer in Pinar del Rio. To those who are friendly to our cause I send greetings." ANTONIO MACEO.

Secretary Olney encloses a copy of the act approved February 8, 1871, which relates to the duty of the executives of the several states in certifying to the Secretary of State of the United States the appointment of such electors. And further provides for his furnishing to the electors of his state the same certificate in triplicate under the seal of the state; and the electors in turn are directed to forward this certificate, along with their lists of all persons voted for as president and vice president, to the Department of State.

Confesses His Crime. Charles H. Elliott, now in the Douglas County jail, has confessed to the murder of Guy Hutsonpiller, his friend, in the Windsor Hotel, Omaha. His confession covers twenty typewritten pages. He says Hutsonpiller was about to leave for Montana, and continues: "I owed him $15 and wanted him to sign a receipt for it and he would not. I told him I would not pay unless he did. He called me a fool and said he would take it out of my hide." Elliott says he then picked up a coupling pin and struck his friend, and becoming alarmed at his loud breathing went to a drug store and bought some chloroform, saturated a towel with it and put it over Hutsonpiller's face. He then left the hotel and took the 4:43 North-western, train east and was arrested at Cedar Rapids. He did not know at that time that Hutsonpiller was dead. Two Thousand Killed.

Unconfirmed but apparently authentic information comes of the rout and fearful slaughter of the army under Gen. Weyler in Cuba. Col. Jose Reyes, aid-de-camp of Gen. Maceo, passed through Jacksonville, Fla., Thursday. He says there has been fierce fighting in the Rabi hills in Pinar del Rio. The most sanguinary battle of the war was fought there and 2,000 of Weyler's men were killed in two days and not less than 4,000 wounded. When Weyler went into the field he had 35,000 men in three columns, one of 15,000 under his direct command; one of 10,000 under Gen. Echague, and the third of 10,000 under Gen. Munoro. They found Maceo entrenched in a crescent-shaped range of hills. Gen. Munoro was directed to oust him from this position and Gen. Echague to execute a flank movement and cut off the Cuban general's retreat. Gen. Munoro went forth gallantly upon the field, but when he had arrived at the foot of the hills his forces met with a withering fire that cut gaps in the ranks. Maceo's men shot from behind rocks and trees and gradually gave way before the Spaniards, who, encouraged by what they thought to be victory, pursued with extreme confidence of success.

Without the least premonition a deafening explosion was heard and a scene followed resembling the mine horror at Petersburg during the civil war. Horses and men were blown high in the air and fell to the earth dead and mangled. A dynamite mine had been touched off by Maceo's electrician. Maceo then used his dynamite guns and still greater havoc was wrought. Col. Reyes' men say that Weyler lost 700 men in the explosion and 500 more in the charge that followed, as well as 1,000 wounded. On the following day, Maceo, who knew of the reserve force under Weyler, retreated to a stronger position. He was then attacked by a column under Echague, who was driven from the field. Eight hundred men were killed and 1,300 wounded. It was in this fight that Echague lost his leg. It was torn off by a dynamite bomb. His men then became panickered. They feared another mine and would not obey when ordered to attack a second time. On the third day Maceo again retreated, maneuvering continually to entrap Weyler into a field that had been honeycombed with dynamite. In the meantime Weyler heard that there was danger of an uprising in Havana because he had failed to crush Maceo and he hastened back to the capital. In a letter brought by Col. Reyes to prominent Cubans Maceo says: "Have no fear. I am like a turtle in his shell. If they get into my shell God help them."
