A STEAMER BURNED

NUTMEG STATE WRECKED IN LONG ISLAND SOUND.

Six of the Crew and Three Unknown Persons Known to Be Dead-Fear Expressed that Others Lost Their Lives by Swamping of Boats.

New York: The steamer Nutmeg State burned to the water's edge Saturday morning and is now lying a wreck on Old Reef, Long Island Sound. The passengers were taken off by the City of Lawrence. Capt. Brooks of the Nutmeg State said on his arrival here that six of his crew had burned | held two notes aggregating $474.50, renewed to death and he feared some of the passengers suffered a like fate.

Capt. Brooks said the first he knew of the fire was when he saw a blaze around the smokestack. The fire was burning rather briskly. He got men to work trying to put out the fire. The vessel steered directly for Sandpoint and all steam was put on her. Coming near Sandpoint the captain directed the bow of the boat dead ahead for the beach and ran her ashore. Between thirty and forty passengers were aboard.

The City of Lawrence saw the fire and steamed over towards the burning vessel. The boats put out and by heroic work the passengers and remaining members of the crew were taken off and brought to this city. Following is the list of known dead: SAMUEL JAYNE, baggagemaster.

BARNEY HENDRICK, oiler. Two unknown women and little girl. PATRICK COFFEE, first mate. TORENCE BRADY, cabin boy. CHARLES ANDERSON, member of

THOMAS MURPHY, member of crew. It is feared some of the women and children were lost by the swamping of boats. The vessel and cargo were valued at $200 .-

SERIOUS RIOT.

One Killed and Several Injured-More Trouble Expected.

Springfield, Ill.: At a christening of a child in a Polack family at Auburn, twenty miles from Springfield, Sunday evening about 6 o'clock a riot started between be completed soon after Nov. 1. The mathe Hungarians and Polacks, and Stephen Roski, a Hungarian, was instantly killed. The foreigners work for the Chicago-Virden Coal Company at the Auburn mine and live in company houses on a tract of land called the Patch.

There has long been an enmity between are said to have been injured in the fight, but they would not allow the physicians who were sent to the seene to see them. Two men have been held by the friends of Roski who are believed to be his murderers. Sheriff Woods was notified at once of the killing and left with a posse of deputies to arrest the participants in the fight.

A similar dispatch to the State Register says the foreigners are expected to resist arrest, and the officers may have to fight them before they are taken into custody.

BETRAYED THE PRESIDENT.

Commander of Government Forces Shows Treachery.

Caracas, Venezuela: Advices from Petare, ten miles from Caracas, say that | tween $14,000 and $15,000. the people have arisen against President Andrade and a crisis is eminent here. The commander of the government forces has betrayed the president and will allow the revolutionary army to march on Caracas without a battle.

President Andrade will probably be forced to retire, re-establishing the government at Puerto Cabello.

United States Minister Loomis recently made a long argument before President Andrade urging a suspension of the law relative to foreign insurance companies, the enforcement of which, the minister said, would drive all such companies from Venezuela. The result of Mr. Loomis' argument was that a suspension of the law was granted until March, when the statutes will be amended by congress.

SCHOONER TYPO SUNK.

Four of the Crew Drowned in an Accident on Lake Huron.

Harbor Beach, Mich .: The steamer W. P. Ketcham ran down the little schooner Typo on Lake Huron Sunday. The Typo instantly sunk and four of the crew were drowned. Their names follow:

HENRY LEXFORD, mate of the Typo. DAN CARR, seaman. JOHN CAMPBELL, seaman.

MRS, ADAMS, cook. The captain of the vessel and two seamen managed to escape from the wreck and were picked up by the Ketcham.

The Ketcham is bound down from Chicago to Buffalo with a cazgo of grain. The Typo was met off Middle Island, near Alpena. The impact of the two boats, which sunk the smaller, only resulted in a few scratches on the steamer's cabin. The Typo was owned by J. P. Nagle of Toledo.

Luther Seminary Dedicated.

Minneapolis: Luther seminary, at Hamline, midway between Minneapolis and St. Paul, was dedicated Sunday in the presence of an audience of 4,000 people. The sermon was preached by Rev. V. Koren, president of the synod. The sum $58,000 has been expended on the seminary, and everything is furnished with the exception of the chapel.

California Is Shaken.

Santa Rosa, Cal .: One of the severest shocks of earthquakes ever felt here took place Oct. 12 and created great excitement. Chimneys were thrown down and plaster in many parts of the city was shaken from the laths. A few minutes afterwards two other shocks of a similar nature, but less severe, followed.

Nashville Goes Democratic.

Nashville, Tenn.: Hon. J. M. Head was elected mayor of Nashville, the entire straight Democratic ticket being victorious.

FLASHES STATE OF NEBRASKA

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN A CON-DENSED FORM.

Columbus Bank Victimized by John Tannahill, Who Negotiates Notes and Frequently Renewed the Pronounced Forgeries-Other Items.

Henry Ragatz, a prominent business man, was notified by the State Bank at Columbus that it held a note for $450 for which he was security and which was past due. Ragatz found his name had been forged to a note and that the signature was a bungling imitation. He then learned that this was a renewal note, the original having been given some three years ago and renewed about three times a year. The note was signed by John Tannahill as principal and it was he who had always negotiated the paper. The Commercial National Bank of the same city also six or seven different times, always signed with Tannahill as principal and Harry B. Reed, a farmer living north of town, as security. Mr. Reed admitted he had signed notes for Mr. Tannahill a long time ago, but said he had signed nothing for him in over a year and these notes were also forgeries. The First National Bank then discovered it was holding two notes negotiated by Tannahill, one for $120 with Carl Kramer as security and the other for $100, secured by Mrs. Phoebe J. Lawrence. Mr. Kramer says his signature is a forgery and as Mrs. Lawrence lives in Polk County the bank cannot tell that her signature is gen-

A scramble has ensued among the attorneys for the different banks to file attachthe edge of town, which consists of thirtyconsiderable improvements in the way of hot houses and other buildings.

Tannahill has lived in Columbus more than twenty-five years. He left a few days previous to the discovery ostensibly unchanged, and if after my duties as County, but has not since been heard from.

Beets Not So Plenty This Year.

The beet harvest at Fremont and Ames s progressing. The yield is not quite up to that of last year in some localities, but the sugar content and coefficient of purity is above the standard, so that it will fully make up for the lack of quantity. The sugar content has increased considerably since the first frost. As the factory of the Standard Beet Sugar Company is not yet completed, beets are being placed in silos. The dry weather is helping out the beet raisers, the beets being remarkably free from dirt. The sugar factory at Ames will chinery is now in position and the walls

Hogs Kill Farmer John Barton.

John A. Barton, a farmer living near Cheney, who was subject to fits, was found dead and his body partly devoured by hogs in a pen on the place by his sister, Mrs. the Hungarians and Polacks. Several men | Bronson, who lived with him. Mrs. Bronson drove the hogs off, but was compelled to stand guard over the body all one afternoon until she was able to make the neighbors hear her cries for assistance. The presumption is Barton was feeding the hogs when overcome by one of his attacks and the hogs fought him.

Stolen Furs Recovered.

Chief of Police Martin White notified the Omaha police department by wire from Chicago that he had recovered the entire lot of furs stolen from the vault of the Shukert Fur Company two monts ago, and they will be delivered to the owner as soon as he can go to Chicago to identify them. The furs were traced by the police as far as Sioux City a few days after they were taken, but all track of them was lost at that point. The furs were valued at be-

Flaming Hayfield Fires Barn.

A passing locomotive on the Union Paeific road set fire to the grass cast of Columbus and, driven by a high wind, the flames soon reached the hayfield of William Lockhart, destroying his barn, several tons of hay, six hogs, a wagon and considerable farm machinery before it could be subdued. His loss will be something over $500, with no insuurance. Adjoining property was saved only by hard work.

Terrible Plunge in the Dark.

Mrs. D. T. Martyn, who had been visiting her sister at Monroe, went to the depot to take the train for home and in the darkness fell from the platform, sustaining injuries which rendered her unconscious nearly five hours. She is suffering chiefly from shock, and just how her injuries may terminate cannot be determined.

His Wound Hastens His Death.

Chris Yocum, the night watchman who was shot in the knee by a tramp near the Nye-Schneider elevator at Fremont last winter, died last week, his death being partly due to the wound. He leaves a widow and several children. The man who did the shooting succeeded in getting Welcome for a New Pastor. The Methodist congregation of Osceola welcomed Rev. J. W. Swan, its new pastor, with a reception and supper at which covers were laid for 400. An address of welcome was delivered by J. H. Mickey. Rev. Swan's last charge was Wahoo.

Train Wreck on the Elkhorn. A passenger train on the Elkhorn road ran into a freight train at Arlington. Both engines were badly wrecked. The trainmen were severely bruised and the passen-

Conductor Coffin Hurt.

Conductor W. W. Coffin of Wymore was crushed between the engine and the first car of an extra at Dawson and badly injured. Coffin is one of the oldest freight conductors running out of Wymore.

Takes His Own Life.

A telegram received in Plattsmouth says Edward S. Greusel, master mechanic for the Burlington, shot and killed himself at Havelock.

Woman Bound Over.

Clara Ole Williams, a woman aged about 35 years, was given a hearing before Judge Hunter at Wayne the other day and bound over to the district court in the sum of $1,000, in default of which she was remanded to jail. She is charged with stealing a horse from the farm of George Rowher, northwest of that city.

With a Horse-Power Sheller. William and Frank Richardson shelled 3.271 bushels of corn in ten hours for John Bashman at Eight Mile grove, near Plattsmouth, with a horse-power sheller,

CHAPTER XIII .- (Continued.) "Surely, Mr. Dobbs," said Herman, to all appearances not in the least disturbed, you must be satisfied that my loved uncle may be out late." had every confidence in me. I cannot betray it. My conscience would not allow me to vote for other than Herman Craven. Until my guardianship of my dead uncle's daughter shall expire I must hold they are Baltimoreans." the reins of this bank in my own hands, and to yourself and the directory I look for aid and encouragement. I desire Mr. of it." Chadbourn to remain our vice-president, and there shall be no change in the policy of the bank. You, its able attorney and my uncle's lifelong friend, will, I know, be here to counsel me. I desire you to talk with the other directors before the meeting this evening and to assure them, for me, that it is not ambition that impels | phens! I should find the name here-Ste-

understand, Mr. Dobbs?" "Yes, yes, I understand," answered the lawyer. "The directors will be greatly surprised. I had best see them at once, ment suits against Tannahill's property on | since you have fully determined on this course. I cannot answer for what some three acres of nursery and orchard with of them may do. They may withdraw their interests from the bank."

out the wishes of my murdered uncle. You

"I trust not, Mr. Dobbs. You will still be our counselor-Mr. Chadbourn, our vice-president. The directory will remain the directory desire, I will gladly join them in placing any one of their number at the head of the bank. You must understand how I feel about the matter."

"Yes, certainly! I think I do, and I will lose no time in conferring with the directors. At 7 o'clock this evening we asand see you before that time.'

you and the directory.

The old attorney arose from his chair gaged in?" and left the office.

"That was smooth work," thought Hercan stand two years of this humdrum life, more detectives. now that I have money. I hope Dobbs the matter," and Herman drew a cigar | within the railing. from his pocket, lighted it and puffed the wreaths of smoke contentedly aloft.

Attorney Dobbs had left the bank with | card." the full intent of doing the very thing Herman Craven did not want him to doand counseling her to appeal to the courts for protection against the wiles of her guardian and the administrator of her father's estate, and straightway he bent his steps in the direction of the late banker's residence.

He had reached Market street and turned the corner when he saw before him the tall form of Lang Sellars.

"Good morning, Mr. Dobbs," said the detective. "I am just from your office. I desire to see you on important business. You look annoyed.'

"I am, Sellars, I am, and a very important matter takes me at once to the residence of our lost friend. I go to consuft his daughter. I fear for the future, Sellars. I will see you later."

"Have you spoken of fears to anyone

"Not in the matter that is now agitating me. Of course, you know we are all at sea. But I must not delay. I will be at the office later."

"I must see you now, Mr. Dobbs-at once, before you visit Miss DeRosette."

"But, Mr. Sellars-"The matter agitating you is that Herman Craven has decided to become president of 'The Cape Fear Bank.' "

"True, Sellars, but how-" "Never mind now, Mr. Dobbs: but please return to your office with me and I will convince you that it is to the interest of all parties concerned that Herman Craven be not thwarted at this time."

"Is it possible?" exclaimed the attorney. "Well, there would in fact be but one way to thwart him."

"And that one way must not be resorted to."

"I am glad I encountered you. That you have reasons for your statement I am well aware. Come!' Ten minutes later the two men were seated in the lawyer's office in close conversation, and for fully an hour were they there closeted. At last Sellars arose to his feet, and the attorney accompanied him to the door. "You have convinced me, Sellars," said the lawyer. "There shall be no obstruction. Herman Craven shall be elected without a dissenting voice, and his every That is all I know about him." movement shall be watched." "It is well," said Sellars, as he strode men in Baltimore, who would answer to from the door. gers were shaken up, but nobody was Ten minutes later Attorney Dobbs dispatched a messenger for Directors Chadbourn, Hammond and Hoyt, and when they were arrived there was another consultation, the result of which was that at know you. True, some sharps might try 7 o'clock, when the directors convened, to do you.' Herman was unanimously elected president of "The Cape Fear Bank," and when

"Quite a raise in the fortunes of Stephen Craven's son, my dear uncle," he muttered. "I have stepped into your shoes very nicely. Your foul murderer soon comes to trial and will die on the gallows. Your fortune mine, your daughter mine! So much for Stephen Craven's son!" And fancied security.

CHAPTER XIV.

At 8 o'clock on the night of the first of September a tall, raw-boned man, dressed door of Bartridge Brothers about 12 in the garb of a Southern planter, entered o'clock. the office of the Chesapeake Hotel in Baltimore, and on the register inscribed the name, "O. A. Maltby, South Carolina." "Supper, Mr. Maltby?" asked the clerk. Sellars.

"No, no, thank you; had supper on the boat. Save me a room on the second floor. I have some friends I wish to look up and counter there. If you don't know exactly month. That is not much, but it will help where to locate them, you will find their names and places of residence there, if

"Thanks," said Maltby, as he moved towards the directory. "I will avail myself

Mr. Maltby turned over the leaves of the directory, casually glancing from leaf to leaf, until he had reached a page at the head of which appeared the letter S. Four pages of names commencing with S he passed, then bent over the book.

"St-St-Here we are! St-St-Steme, but a feeling that I shall be carrying phens Adam-Stephens Alfred-Stephens Benjamin-Stephens Bruce, and here is Charles M. Stephens, wholesale grocer-Clarence Stephens, attorney at law-Stephens - Stephens - Stephens - Humph! There is no C. A. Stephens recorded here," thought Mr. Maltby, as he closed the book. "Well, have you located your friends,

Mr. Maltby?" asked the clerk. "No, I am disappointed, too. The name of the one I most desire to find does not appear here." "Then your friend is not an old resident of Baltimore. That book is this year's di- | to-day.' to visit his brother at Bellwood, in Butler | guardian and administrator shall cease, | rectory, and unless he has taken up his residence here since April last his name would appear there; but perhaps I can assist you. What letter were you tracing?" "S. My friend's name is Stephens-C.

A. Stephens." "No such name here," said the clerk," "and I never heard of a C. A. Stephens. semble here in this room. I may drop in Here is the wholesale grocer, Charles M. "Pray do; but in any event I shall rely and resides on Laurel street. Here are a defend you in case of necessity. Remem- One morning when the son was away on you, and in all matters be guided by dozen others commencing with C, but no ber your murdered master. Much may the sire hailed the conveyance, and at C. A. What business is your friend en-

"Oh. he is not a friend, merely a friend to parties with whom I am acquainted, man, "and it will win. I don't believe a and who wished me to look him up. They man will vote against me after that. Chad- were not certain that he was in Baltibourn will be in and I will promise to more. It does not matter in the least. If withdraw in his favor at the expiration I encounter him, well and good; if not, the of two years. They may have the bank same," and so saying Mr. Maltby turned then and welcome, or what there is left away and a half hour later entered the

"Could I see the chief?" he asked of the

"He is engaged in his private office," "I declare I forgot to provide myself with one," said the planter. "Just tell namely, of consulting the young heiress him that O. A. Maltby of South Carolina is anxious to see him.' The secretary vanished, but soon returned and conducted Mr. Maltby to an inner

The planter complied, and the secretary

"What can I do for you, sir. You are a planter, I judge. Runaway negroes that you are trying to locate?"

"No, sir! No, Thorp, no! I have come to interview you," said Maltby, in an entirely different voice from that the chief had heard when he inquired for him in the outer office.

"Hey!" exclaimed Thorp, jumping to his feet. "Well, I'll be-So you have turned planter, Mr. Sellars-planter! Give me your hand. I have not seen you in a coon's age. What wind blows you here?"

"Thorp, you sized me up about Planter Maltby of South Carolina, for the time being, and I am here to inquire if in your department you have any record of one C. A. Stephens."

"I can answer that without even referring to the books. I never heard the name before. Baltimore contains no man of that name.'

"Are you sure, Thorp?" "Certain! To be sure, some one of the many crooks that infest the city may on occasion have used the name." "I understand that. What I wished to ascertain was whether there was a man known to your department as C. A. Ste-

"There is not; but what crime has C. A. Stephens committed?" "None that I know of. I merely wish to locate the man."

"I see! He may have committed a crime! Well, I can't help you without a description of your man, perhaps not then. What does he look like?"

"I have never seen him, to my knowledge."

middle age and has a grayish mustache. "Humph! You will find five hundred that description." "I know it. I imagine he is a spor character-perhaps a drummer." "You might make a round of our gambling houses. No one on earth would

"I am willing," said Sellars. "Yes; well, I will give you a list of the and were bound round with cordage.

you.' "Good! I will." Two planters were soon making a round of the gambling houses.

They explored fully a dozen, and several men whose faces Planter Maltby closely scanned would have come up to Adam's out renewal of the inner tube we candescription of C. A. Stephens, but some- not afford to sneer at the shortness of onward strode the new bank president in thing was lacking. Of course, Thorp knew | their life. They were, at any rate, mothem all, and Sellars was fully satisfied bile, for they could be carried on a that he had not yet enc ntered his man. "There is but one more of any note," observed Thorp, as they stepped from the "And that?" "Abbott's, on Calvert street." "Well, it's on the way to the hotel," said

Ten minutes later our two friends entered the gilded dive of Abbott, which at the time was the most notorious gambling house in Baidmore. As late as it was, the large rooms were yet filled with men from all stations of life. Two roulette wheels kept up a ceaseless hum in their circles, and players were seated at three faro tables, while the oldfashioned game of poker monopolized the attention of many.

The two planters laid a dollar or two here and there to divert any suspicion, and soon left the place. As they neared the door a flashily dressed young sport entered it, and Sellars heard him ask an attendant if Abbott had returned.

"He's doing the boys in Washington," was the answer.

"Thanks, Thorp," said Sellars, when they were again on the street. "I have at least accomplished all I expected to this trip. I have learned that if C. A. Stephens is a Baltimore man he was sailing "Yes. Well, there is a directory on the under an alias on the seventeenth of last me to shape my course." "You are entirely welcome, Lang. I am at your service at any time I can be of assistance. Good night.'

At 7 o'clock on the night of the third, Sellars entered the door of his home in Wilmington. After supper he entered the office, lighted his pipe, sat back in his armchair and sent for Calban. "I's got nothin' to 'port, Mars Lang," said the negro, as he entered the office. "I has watched de banker's house ebery night close, and no one ain't gone in or come out 'ceptin' them I know." "That was all' you could do, Calban.

There, see who is at the door." The negro opened it, and Aunt Hannah, looking much agitated, entered, followed by her daughter Millie. "Ah, you, Hannah, and Millie, too? Two chairs, Calban! Here, set them close to the desk. You have something new, Han-

"Mars Lang," said the negress, excitedy, "Millie de one what's got news, and it may be 'portant news. I jes fine it out

"Well, Millie," said Lang, encouragingly, "what is it?"

"Mars Lang," said Millie, looking wildly at the detective, "you won't let Mars Herman sell me?"

"Sell you, Millie? No, no, he can't sell you. Your mistress, I doubt not, will soon free you, and until she does you can rest assured that she will not part with you. Stephens. He is an old man near seventy, No, no, or after, either. Speak up, I will depend on you.'

"Mars Lang, Mammy say to-day dat Mars Herman nebber bring any one 'sides hisself into de house.'

"Well, did he?" "Mars Lang, on de night befo' de mur-I was in her room rubbin' her haid wid camphor 'til twelve o'clock. When I come out of her room into de hall, I close de of it. I think before, for I don't believe I office of John L. Thorp, chief of Balti- do' behin' me, and start down de hall to my room. As I open de do' I glanced back, and I seed a light shinin' as dough won't visit Hattie and confer with her on young man who was seated at the desk somebody was comin' down de stairs from de flo' above. Dar was no light burnin' in de hall, and I slipped in my room; but Hundreds of Thousands said the secretary, "but I will take in your | lef' de do' ajar, and soon two men come down de stairs."

"Two men?" exclaimed Sellars. "Two

"Yes, two men, Mars Lang. One was Mars Herman, and de odder was a taller and an older man, wid a mustache. Mars Herman was carryin' a lamp, and da was both in dar stockin' feet. Da looked "Pray be seated, Mr. Maltby," said the mighty nerbous, leastwise, Mars Herman did, and da walked mighty keerful. Da come on down de hall and went in Mars Herman's room.

"I was dat skeered I lak to fell down. First, I tought I go tell Miss Hattie. Den I was skeered, and I dassent, so I locked my room do' and laid down wid my clothes on, and dar I laid 'til mawnin', when mammy called me. I nebber said nothin' kaze I was skeered of Mars Herman. Now, dat's all."

"Does your mistress know of this, Mil-"Not a soul know it, Mars Lang, 'cept-in' what's hyar.' "Then not a word, Millie; nor you, Hannah, to a living soul. You are sure Herright when I entered the office. I am | man Craven did not see you, and is ignorant of the fact that you saw him and his companion?"

"Certain, Mars Lang!" "You never saw this man that was with Herman before or since?" "Nebber, Mars Lang, dat I knows of, dough de light was dim and I couldn't see berry well.' "Well, that is all. Return home. Your information may be very important. I shall be at the house at 10 o'clock tomorrow. Look for me at the rear door, and if your mistress starts to leave the house, detain her. Otherwise, say nothing to her. Remember, not a word. Good night. Show them out, Calban."

"Good night, Mars Lang." "So, so!" exclaimed the detective, as the door closed behind the negress and her daughter. "Another link in the chain-C. A. Stephens visited the banker's house on the night of the seventeenth, and more, he was on the second floor in company with Herman, and in 'ais stocking feet. "Gods! They had visited the attic! Fool that I was not to have explored it on the night of the murder. Fool! Fool! "Nor have I his photograph. I under Then and there, I should have captured stand he is about six feet in height, of | C. A. Stephens, the murderer of Alvin De-Rosette."

(To be continued.)

Cannon Made of Leather. According to one account, cannon were built of the most hardened leather, girt about with hoops of iron and brass, the honor of having invented this make being a matter of dispute between Sweden and Scotland. According to another, they had a core of tin.

an hour later he wended his way home new houses. You know the old ones, or if In neither case could they be exthere was a look of triumph on his fea- you will wait ten minutes I will go with pected to last long, though we are told that they could be "brought to discharge" as often as ten times in succession; but when we reflect how few are the rounds that can be fired from the monster guns of our own day withpony's back or stacked together by the half-dozen in "barricades of wood borne on wheels."

> Original writers are so scarce they experience consider ble difficulty convincin' the public they are in their right

Barbed Wire for Italian Vineyards. The use of barbed wire is increasing largely in Southern Italy. It is used for trailing vines and is found of great service in keeping thieves out of the vineyards after dark. The vines being in many cases only a few feet apart, it is a matter of considerable difficulty to avoid the barbs, even in the daytime, and at night it is practically impossible. The wire need be only of the lightest kind, as the lengths used: are comparatively short and no cattle have to be contended with.

"You May Bend the Sapling But Not the Tree."

When disease has become chronic and deep seated it is often difficult to cure it. That is the reason why it is best totake Hood's Sarsaparilla when disease first shows itself. In long-seated, tenacious cases, Hood's Sarsaparilla is alsowonderfully successful.

His Match.

During the recent strike of cotton operatives at Clitheroe, near Blackburn, a man, seemingly somewhat tipsy, accosted a number of non-society weavers who were standing by a factory gate one dinner time and rather roughly said:

"Say, lend me a match." One young chap, struck by the peculiarity of the request, and thinking to raise a laugh at the drunken fellow's expense, drew a box of matches fromhis pocket, handed the other a match, and then sharply said: "But when will you return the-

"After the strike," came the answer as quickly as it was unexpected .- Tit

He Was an Orphan.

A very amusing story is told in connection with Leopold de Rothschild's father. The son was in the habit of taking the same cab every morning from Piccadilly to St. Swithin's lane, and always gave the Jehu half a crown. the end of the journey gave the driver a florin. Cabby looked at the coin wistfully. "What's wrong?" asked the old man. "Nothing, sir," was the reply, "but Mr. Leopold always gives me half der, Miss Hattie hab de haidache, and a crown," "I don't wonder at it. Mr. Leopold is a spendthrift, but he can afford it-he has a rich father. I am ana orphan, and can't."

STRIKE!

Are Involved.

Trouble in an Important Part of the Organization Affects All the Rest-A Perfectly Harmonlous System Easily Thrown Out of Gear.

Organized labor has reached such a stage that anything affecting a particular branchof it draws all the rest into the difficulty.

It is exactly the same way with the different organs of the human body. Work too hard, eat too much, drink too much, exercise but little, be a little irregular in any way, and the liver quits work. Then the bowels become constipated and the stomach goes on strike. The heart is affected, the brain follows suit, and every part of the body is dragged into the trouble. The only way out of it is to go at the source of all this-the liver. Square your-

Cascarets Candy Cathartic make thingsright with the liver. They perfume the breath, prevent food from souring on the stomach, give tone to the bowels, strengthen the intestinal muscles, while they are cleaning and stirring up the liver to renewed activity. No matter how long a case has been incurable. Cascarets are guaranteed to put self with the liver and all will get back to regular natural work.

things right as they should be, and set the whole machinery a-going, and you canget them at any drug store or by mail for price—10c, 25c, or 50c. Address Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago or New York. This is the CASCARET tablet. Every tablet of the only genuine Cascaret bears the magic letters "CCC." Look at the tablet before you buy, and beware of frauds, imitations and substitutes.

W. L. DOUCLAS $3 & $3.50 SHOES UNION

d of leather, size and width, plain or cap toe. Catalogue D Free. W. L. DOUGLAS SHOE CO., Brockton, Mass.

Dr. Bull's Pills cure Dyspepsia. Trial, 20 for 50 企图对於[2]於三是四個元章可 DERES WILLBE ALL FLSE FAILS.

Dest Cough Syrup. Tasses Good. Under the time. Sold by druggists. BONDER VERNING