In our town as the two little boys of old, each in their attempts to bring something excelling the other, one said "We've got the smallpox down at our house." We seem to excel our brethren.

Edward Satterlee, merchant, from Nenzel, was in town Monday on business and made the editor a pleasant business call. We like to meet these men who look on the bright side of things. PETER J. DONOHER DEAD.

Saturday night about 12 o'clock Peter J. Donohoe died of heart failure. The family were at the bedside with the exception of his brother Will, a physician, who is practicing his profession in Ogden, Utah. This is a sad occurrence in our town and brings sorrow to many hearts. Peter, as he was generally called, was well liked by all who knew him. He was a scholarly gentleman of good business qualifications. No one will be more missed than he nor will the family be alone in their mourning. The DEMOCRAT extends sincere sympathies to the bereaved family and friends in their time of sorrow.

J. W. Burleigh has been out on his arm near Britt husking corn for the last two weeks. Mr. Burleigh says the corn was a good yield and that he will have nearly 2500 bushels. Who says that Cherry county can't raise corn?

Dr. Compton went out to Lynn Barker's place on the Niobrara near the mouth of the Snake one day last week, and when he returned he informed us that Lynn's family had increased by one—a boy—born on Friday evening last.

A woman in this town told another woman the other day that she feared her husband was becoming demented. When asked why, she said that she caught him out at the woodpile one day last week, and he was cutting wood, something he has never been known to do before.

J. F. Broad, formerly of our city, who traded his house and lot for Jewey Kellogg's farm on the North side, was in town Monday and paid respects to the editor. Mr. Broad sees the value of this country and is willing to turn his attention to stock raising. Many of our people would do well to pay more attention to stock and depend less on farming.

Andrew Schatztauer and family of Wood Lake moved into Valentine last week and occupy the property of William Steele just south of the M. & C. Church. Mr. Schatztauer has purchased Theo. Tillson's livery barn and will engage himself in the livery and feed business while sending his children to our school. We extend greetings to this worthy family and wish them success.

G. W. Burge of Kennedy came in on Sunday to get a doctor to go back with him to vaccinate his family. There are several other families that are expecting to be vaccinated out here so it will be harvest for the doctor. Mr. Burge says there is a case of smallpox or whatever this disease is, out in the sand hills, that was taken while in Valentine during the races.

John Niess, ranchman on the Reservation, returned from a trip east this week bringing with him a flock of twenty-one registered Angora goats, a pair of thoroughbred Poland China pigs and a fine two-year-old blooded bay stallion. This is a step in the right direction. If other stockmen will only follow John's example this country will gain a reputation for high grade stock.

Jim Gillaspie is in town this week laying over to keep from spreading disease, as he thinks that since he has been exposed it would be wrong to carry disease out into the country if he should be effected with it. Most of our people consider the smallpox scare as a joke, but for the sake of our friends we are often times prone to do things that our better judgment tells us is unnecessary except that warning has been given.

Last week J. E. Thackrey and his father, Samuel I. Thackrey, from Manhattan, Kas., who spent a week visiting here, together with Rev. Cumbow went out on the lakes hunting. They secured a large turtle from some hunters and Mr. Thackrey intended to take it down to the Agricultural College at Manhattan but on the way back from the lakes, while down on the river near C. C. Thompson's place, Mr. Turtle evidently thought it was "a long time between drinks," scrambled out of the spring wagon and made for the river. He was not missed until the party arrived in town out some of Mr. Thompson's family afterward saw the turtle in the river.
