

The Man Who Doesn't Advertise.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead That to himself he hath not said, "My trade of late is getting bad, I'll try another ten-inch ad."

Kennedy.

Haying is all the go now in these parts. Ben Bachelor and family were Kennedy visitors Sunday. Mrs. Gilbert, of Omaha, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Erickson.

Broken Arm is not feeling very well this week so can't write a very long letter this time. Wm. Steadman and Homer Tait passed through Kennedy on the way to the ranch last Sunday.

An Eastern poet bursts forth in the following strain: "Take up the fat man's burden, go soak your shirt in sweat, and seek in vain for a cooling breeze with a face all streaming wet; go try to find some shady spot where you can sit and stew, and have some snoozer spring this gag, 'Is it hot enough for you?'"

A full fledged sensation, in which a Stuart character is star actress, has burst upon the public. The woman has already figured in a half dozen marriage scrapes and has now put the cap sheaf on her notorious career.

Western Nebraska May Become a Forest.

"It is a positive fact that timber may be made to grow on the sand hills of Western Nebraska and that the conditions are favorable for converting the great tract of arid lands into an immense forest.

Thus spoke Gifford Pinchot, chief of the bureau of forestry of the agricultural department of the United States and W. L. Hall, expert superintendent of the tree planting division of the same department, both of whom are in the city, registered at the Millard.

Messrs Pinchot and Hall called upon Senator Millard today and were assured by him that he will do all in his power to induce the government to take hold of tree planting in Western Nebraska and push the work. It is conceded that in order to carry the work to the desired end money must be had. So thoroughly is the senator convinced that the scheme is feasible that at the next session of congress, he will labor to secure an appropriation.

Mr. Pinchot is here from Washington, merely to consult with Mr. Hall and secure facts upon which to base his report.

Speaking of the work Mr. Hall said: "Ten years ago we planted pines in the sand hills in the extreme southwest portions of Holt county. They have grown rapidly and are now from fifteen to eighteen feet high and look as healthy and thrifty as if grown in their native forest. The dry weather does not hurt them. In fact their roots seek and find moisture. At any pace in the sand hills, if you dig down two feet you will find moisture. The roots of the pine find this moisture and then the growth is rapid. We have planted in the valleys and upon the highest hills and the trees seem to do as well in one place as in the other. I am thoroughly convinced that the entire sand hill country can be converted into a great pine forest. This having been done, there will be no difficulty in having it set aside as a forest reserve and in time it will be of incalculable value to the northwest.

"Out in the sand hills there are thousands of acres of land that are worthless at this time, but the entire tract can be made valuable if the plan is pushed along. There is no difficulty in getting the pine. The 'bull' pine along the Long Pine river and in the Black Hills is well adapted to this growing and it can be shipped in at little expense.

"For several months I have been up in that country studying the conditions and am firmly convinced that the tree planting has passed far beyond the experimental stage. We have a field party of six experts constantly working up in that country and they are all of the opinion that the sand hills comprise an ideal tract for a pine forest."

Not only does Mr. Hall make the statements attributed to him, but he brings with him numerous photographs showing the pine groves and thickets that have been planted. Those pictures indicate that the trees are healthy and have made rapid growth.—World Herald.
