Some people think all others are fools who fail to agree with them.

The infrequency of lucid intervals in some people cause them to believe that other people are fools all the time just as a drunken man sees every one staggering.

There is a difference between men who know enough to give other people just credit for what they may know, and one who is so narrow minded as to believe that he is the only one who has learned anything—All others are fools.

When you see a man suffering with narrow minded conceit you hear him complain mostly of how little other people know. An original idea never enters the mind of a conceited fool often enough to cause him to believe that anyone else knows anything but himself.

Pull down your neighbor and you pull down yourself, says the Healdsburg (California) Enterprise. Put a wire across the path of progress and you'll break your own neck. Jump the rich man and you'll suffer from poverty. Be helpful, bighearted and broad gauged. There is nothing that hurts business so quickly as the prominence in the world of a tight-faced, clamfisted, hawk-eye, cat-footed, penny-squeezing, hog-hearted, man-hating cross between a glue pot and a vinegar jug, who never spends a dollar unless he sees a dollar and ninety-eight cents in sight.

Two more companies will soon arrive at Ft. Niobrara and will make about three hundred men stationed here.

There was a crowded house to see Carrie Nation last Thursday night. There were not seats enough to go 'round and many were compelled to stand. Carrie made a good wild talk and said many truthful and wise things that many people might profit by. Those who most needed her instruction will never heed it and will go right on believing she hit the other fellow the hardest. She admits that she is a fanatic and that her mind has become unbalanced but that she was made so in her zealous methods as pres. of the W. C. T. U. of Barber Co., Kan., to close up joints which she threatened to close up according to law and failing, thought it her duty to take the law in her own hands which she did and was so successful in her first destruction of property that she made other attempts all the while cheered by such people as are always ready to urge others into a fight but are lacking the courage to enter the arena themselves. We believe that if you will take away the curiosity of entering these saloons to see what the men are doing, there will be an abundance of opportunities to talk to the proprietors, and that no man can feel proud of a woman who will degrade herself by going among men who are strangers and in a saloon where it is unusual for respectable women to go, seizing the opportunity of talking without introduction under the guise of doing something for humanity. Only the curious can object to this plain statement of facts. What interest some people may have in humanity should not exceed the bounds of propriety in their own actions. It is often times an individual or selfish interest that prompts the most heroic deeds ostentatiously. These should not be encouraged, but to satisfy the curious who go into questionable places and engage in compromising language with strangers they should be given the freedom they desire but they will not be respected by men as well as the modest woman who keeps within her sphere and is found only in the most pleasant surroundings, made so by a perfect system of managing a home and she the queen and admired by every one for the true womanly graces and charms that no public character will ever acquire.

Vincent's interest and later Claude Reece purchased of Mr. Morgareidge and the store was run as Crabb & Co. Now as Mr. Crabb leaves us it is only fitting to jot down this item of history.
