The following clipped from the Alliance Herald is from the pen of James Wilcox and will correct some errors which are afloat that are intended to mislead the public and defeat a worthy candidate.

"The subsidized press of this district—and we use the word understandingly—tell us that General Patrick H. Barry is already beaten in his race for congressional honors, that Moses P. Kinkaid is as certain of being elected as if the people had already spoken. Knowingly, and with no other motive but to deceive they indulge in misrepresentation. They tell us, for instance, that General Barry was born in 1831, attempting thus to create the impression that the heroic old soldier is too old to send to congress—that he has outlived his usefulness and is, in fact, in his dotage. The truth is General Barry was born in '44, and is as hale and hearty, physically, as the average man ten years his junior, with a mind as clear and bright and strong as ever aided in the guidance of our great ship of state. How well does every man who is acquainted with General Barry know this to be true. But carried away with party success, the receipt of pecuniary assistance and the positive assurance of more, the men who control the columns of the republican newspapers of this district will stop at nothing in order to secure the success of the man who represents corporation greed. They tell us that the old veterans will not support General Barry, and to prove their assertion true, quote some "old soldier" who wears the insignia of G. A. R. membership, but who in truth bore scant part in the terrible struggle to prevent the dismemberment of the union. Well they know that all this is false; but like the drowning man who grabs at a straw, they hope to avert the death—political death—of their candidate. But they reckon without their hosts. What real defender of an inseparable union can grasp General Barry's hand, look into that scarred face and let his eye rest upon that empty sleeve, without feeling his blood tingle, and without experiencing a sense of comradeship, of admiration for this heroic brother whose person tells how grandly and heroically he acted out his part in that memorable and terrible time when brother fought against brother, each feeling that his cause was holy. Let the Herald tell you something, old soldiers of Nebraska. Let it tell you how Patrick H. Barry received those facial scars. It was on the 12th of May, 1864 at the battle of Spotsylvania Court House, Virginia, when General Barry's regiment had charged and been repulsed, and the dead and dying were all around and about the stubbornly retreating living. Finally they made a stand, the enemy was checked and the tide was turned. Exploding shells had started a forest fire, in the midst of which lay the wounded boys in blue. Volunteers were called for to attempt their rescue. Among the first to respond was young Barry. Gallantly and with that courage that belongs only to the born hero, the boy fought his way through smoke and flame till he reached a fallen comrade. Gathering the dying soldier in his arms young Barry started on his perilous backward trip bearing his precious burden. The awful flame had reached into the limbs of the trees, but through it went the living and the dying. Patrick H. Barry succeeded, and as he laid his comrade down, out of the reach of the cruel waves, death mercifully ended his sufferings.

fering But at what a fearful cost to the rescuer. His life had almost been the sacrifice. The skin was burned from his neck and face, and writhing in agony and tottering and exhausted from his superhuman effort, proud comrades bore him to a place of rest. And this is the man—this is the hero—that we are told is not competent, is not worthy, is too old to represent us in the halls of congress. Who are we asked to honor instead? Moses P. Kinkaid, a meddler lawyer, chronic office seeker, corporation servitor and smooth tongued apologist for greedy, unprincipled monopolists. Can you do it old soldiers? Can you stultify yourselves? Not in a thousand years could you be guilty of such treachery! And right well the Herald knows it.

The republicans say that there are trusts in England, and that the removal of the tariff is no remedy. But that is a statement that will not hold water. In a recent issue of the Baltimore American, a republican newspaper of the partisan type, it said that there was one consolation to the consumers in the coal trust situation, and that was that the coal trust could not put the prices very much higher, Welsh coal would be brought and would under sell them. That is the sense of the whole thing. If a trust controlled article has no tariff on it, the trusts can't raise their prices above a certain point, else they will meet with foreign competition. But if there is a tariff duty on that article, the trusts can add just as much more to the price as the amount of the duty, and still not have to meet foreign competition.—Ex.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean, a republican newspaper, a day after its editor was in conference with President Roosevelt printed the following editorial, which proves conclusively that there will be no tariff revision, as that editorial may be taken as a reflection of the Presidents views:

"The present tariff law stands on sure foundations and approved principles. It is like a house with a few faulty stones in the walls, but solid on its foundation and strong as ever for all the purposes for which it was constructed. No statesman, looking at the experiences of the last five years, no business man, no manufacturer, no man engaged in industrial employment or enterprise, with knowledge of what the Dingley law did for the country and is doing today, is honestly in favor of disturbing our splendid industrial fabric merely to rectify a few crooked lines. It is a maxim in business as well as in statecraft to let well enough alone. Judged by results, the Dingley act is the best tariff law ever enacted. It wears well. It is doing for the country in 1902 as much as it did in 1897. It is not perfect, but under it the country has been and is enormously prosperous. Leave it alone. The consequence is that those who are opposed to the continual holding up of the American people by the tariff sheltered trusts, and to the selling of our goods abroad at lower prices than here at home, must vote for the party that stands committed to tariff revision, and that party is the democratic party.—Ex.

There are a number of republicans in this part of the "Big Sixth," who while not making any particular noise about it, do not hesitate to say that they will vote for General Barry, for not less than three reasons, viz: First—because they know him to be able and conscientious; second—because when the good of his country required it, he was on the firing line; and third—because they are tired of voting continually for Kinkaid—the standing candidate for any old office.—Boyd Co. Register

The ancient Moses was so young once in time of danger that a friendly hand hid him in the bull rushes; the modern Moses in time of danger was not so young that he couldn't find the bull rushes by himself—and he did.—Boyd Co. Register

In Java

Natives do not glaze coffee with a cheap and impure coating. They have too high a regard for health as well as for the naturally delicious flavor of their popular berry. The very American roasters who glaze their package coffees do not dare to touch or glaze their high priced Mochas and Javas. Why? Lion Coffee is never glazed or adulterated. It is JUST PURE Coffee. The sealed package insures uniform quality and freshness.
