Our Prosperous Farmers. Delightfully cool looking cushions or pillows, whichever one may wish to call them, come with a covering of softly plaited straw, the filling being some sort of imported grass dried to a feathery lightness. Various color combinations are seen in the straw, but a soft green and white plaid effect is prettiest of them all.

A Flour Can. An ingenious convenience for household use is a flour can which has just made its appearance. It is large enough to hold a bag of flour and is equipped with a sifting device operated by a crank so that the contents come out sifted, ready for use, and may be taken by the cupful if so desired.

Followed the Tracks. A tailor in Carthage, northern Africa, hit upon a novel advertising scheme. He had painted a series of immense boot tracks from each side of a city park, both series terminating at his well stocked store.
