STOCKING THE ROYAL LARDER.

Provision for King Edward's House hold Fill a Quarter of an Acre.

The amount of food consumed in the royal household is truly prodigious and consequently the most spacious Jarders are necessary to contain it, says Pearson's Weekly. As a mater of fact, the larders, cellars and ca of the salvation army, wife of Comdairies cover an area of nearly a quarter of an acre.

At all the king's residences except Buckingham palace the bread is produced in the royal bakeries and when the king and his suite are staying at Windsor an average of nearly two sacks of flour a day is converted into bread by the five bakers in the household. There are six bakings a week, and as the loaves leave the oven they are stored in the underground pantries. A great deal of cake and confectionery is also made dally, but the king shows a preference for a light seedcake which is dispatched every day from a small shop in the highlands.

It is somewhat surprising to learn that approximately a ton of meat is consumed every week at Windsor, a good deal of which comes from the king's farm at Sandringham. So varied is the meat supply that his majesty could, if he wished, be served with almost any joint he desired at an hour's notice, though it is very rarely he selects anything not found in the kitchen. The meat, on arrival, is stored in the ice-houses and cut up by the king's buichers.

Sandringham also supplies the royal dairies with a large amount of butter and eggs, which are dispatched from the king's Norfolk home daily. The butter is sent in quarter-pound pats, stamped with the crown. Eighteen gallous of new milk alone are consumed at Windsor every day, besides an equal proportion of cream. A great deal of the cheese comes from Somersetshire.

A daily supply of fish is received all the year round, and twice a week during the season some splendid salmon are sent from the king's fishings on the Dec. Scotland is also responsible for the marmalade, which is never omitted from King Edward's breakfast table.

India contributes its quota to the royal larder, for regular supplies of spices, chutneys and other preparations are sent from Calcutta, together with native cordials, for which the sovereign has a great liking. In fact, every quarter of the empire sends quantities of sardines and pickled pilchards.

ART OF BATTING THE BALL.

Bresnahan, the Giants' Best Hitter,

Gives Points on the Game. Confidence and good eye are the principal things a baseball player must possess if he wishes to become a good batter, together with the ability to judge from the location of the opposing fielders where they expect the man at the bat to hit the ball. The man who stands close to the plate while at the bat and bears in mind that every pitcher, no matter who he is or what his reputation may be, must put the ball over the rubber, can, with practice, become a good and, I may say, a dangerous hitter, even if he has not the natural ability of some of the great batter of the past and present, says Roger Bresnahan in the Illustrated Sporting News.

One very bad fault many young players have is the habit of pulling away from the plate, as it is called, when a ball looks as though it might possibly hit the batter. How many times have you seen a man step back from a curved ball which a second after "cut the plate" and was called a strike, much to his discomforture? The remedy for this, I think, is a simple one, which can be mastered by any young man possessing the necessary confidence: It is simply to step forward and meet the ball before it crosses the plate. In this way the ball is always in front of the batter, and he is, so to speak, on top of it before it

Many pitchers have a puzzling drop | quest; ball which looks easy and fades away from the bat when you strike at it. On the other hand, many of the best boxmen are now using a rise ball pithced with a side arm motion. A batter has a much better chance to kill either of these balls by stepping into them to the limit of the batter's box as they approach the plate. The same thing applies to balls either on the inside or the outside of the plate.

It is much easier to hit the ball by running in on it. By meeting the ball | dead when found. early it can be sent in the direction of the left field. The old theory that If you wish to strike a ball toward the right field you must strike at it after It has crossed the plate is pretty well exploded. By stepping in and meeting the ball in front of you it is just as easy, if not easier, to drive it toward right field as it is to pull it into left
