

A Silent Conviction.
 "Remember," said George Washington's father, "that if I had punished you for chopping down that cherry tree it would have hurt me more than it hurt you."
 George said nothing. But across his mind flashed the thought that his incapacity for prevarication was not an inherited trait.—Washington Star.

A cheap scrub is the dearest animal on a farm. It may be dear in two ways.

A seven-foot mower is a fit companion to the hay loader, as it is just the width required so the loader can take up a swath at a time.

Even a small dairy often means increased fertility on the farm. With most cows the profit comes out of the first six months of the milking period.

A Western man has discovered that his poultry does much better when provided a bed spring on which to roost. He says they rest better and thus are made more profitable.

It certainly looks like a wasteful practice to buck away the straw at thrashing time and burn it. There are so many uses to which straw can be put that it does not look right to see it burned.

The lima bean has been an important article of food with us for many years. At the present time thousands of acres are devoted to its culture, especially in regions of California, where rainfall is scanty.

While dairying has its disadvantages, it has this great advantage, that it enables the farmer to utilize to an unusual extent the cheaper labor on the farm, and to make the most possible out of a small tract of land.

There are several ways of planting strawberries. They are sometimes grown in hills. In this case the plants are set about two feet apart in rows four feet apart, and all the runners are cut off and the full strength forced into the single plant.

In Germany, where an elaborate military system controls everything, every horse is available for the service of the country in the event of war. Every foal is registered and may be taken away at any time by order of the government, at a fixed price made by a committee appointed for that purpose.

One of the remedies for low prices is to endeavor to make each acre of land double itself in production. As many as sixty bushels of wheat have been grown on one acre, as an experiment, yet some farmers who secure twenty bushels per acre are satisfied. There is always "room at the top" in farming, as in every other occupation.

Wherever clover is grown lime gives excellent results on the land, not only on account of its chemical action on the soil, but also because it enters very largely into the composition of plants and is frequently deficient in some soils. Sulphate of lime (land plaster) on heavy soils is a special fertilizer for clover, and may be applied in the spring of the second year.

The best way to set early spring onions is to set out the small sets in the fall. The latter part of November is the proper time. Get the ground in nice shape, same as you would in the spring, and put in the sets in the ordinary manner. In any common winter they will live through with no protection, but it would do no harm to put on a light coat of mulching. You can use either the winter top sets or the regular bottom sets.

An oleomargarine fraud was recently discovered near a town in Indiana. A man in that locality was rapidly getting rich in operating a scheme contrary to the federal laws. He would purchase oleo in Louisville at nine cents per pound, bring it to his home and convert it into what appeared to be good country butter and he would take it back to Louisville and sell it to private customers at from twenty-five to thirty cents per pound. He had established routes in many parts of the city and was doing a big business.

Making Paint with Skim Milk.
 Stir into a gallon of milk about three pounds of Portland cement and add sufficient Venetian red paint powder to impart a good color. Any other colored paint powder may as well be used. The skim milk will hold the paint, in suspension, but the cement, being heavy, will sink to the bottom, so that it becomes necessary to keep the mixture well stirred with a paddle. Mix only enough at a time for one day's use. Six hours after painting this paint will be as immovable and unaffected by water as a mouth-old paint. Cases are on record of this sort of paint being in good condition after twenty years, and it has preserved the wood admirably. The addition of carbolic acid or some other disinfectant makes it very suitable for dairy work, as it then has a cleansing effect.

Seed for Mowing and Pasturage.
 A good mixture of seed for mowing, to be followed by pasturage, according to a Pennsylvania correspondent, is six quarts of timothy, sown with wheat, followed in the spring, without plowing, with a mixture of four quarts red clover, two quarts alsike, four quarts redtop. The clovers, he says, will hold two years and the other grasses will take their place.

Timothy or Clover.
 After an experiment in fattening horses the Illinois Experiment Station says in effect about timothy hay for horses that will be surprising to many horsemen:

A feature of the experiment was the demonstration of the worthlessness of timothy hay, something that horse fleshers will do well to keep in mind. Timothy is good to haul to town and sell to the other fellow. Clover beats it all around. In the experiment horses fed on corn, oats and clover gained 277 pounds each in ninety-two days. The lot fed on the same ration except timothy was substituted for clover, the gain was 142 pounds and the timothy ration cost more than clover.

From this it is plain that timothy is an unprofitable raw material for farm-feeding operations. If you must grow it, sell to the man in town. Corn, oats and clover hay, with a little bran and oil meal, constitute an ideal ration for fattening horses.

Market for Macaroni Wheat.
 When in the '70s Russian settlers in western Kansas had introduced the so-called turkey hard winter wheat it was found to be a good producer, but there seemed to be no market for it. Gradually the millers adapted their machinery to its use and found it excellent. This experience is repeated in the case of the more recently introduced durum or macaroni wheat, which is better adapted to a dry climate than any other wheat yet introduced. Farmers have been anxious about the market, but an investigation recently made by Prof. W. H. Olin, agronomist of the Colorado Agricultural College shows that there need be no further misgivings about selling this wheat. Prof. Olin his replies from Kansas City, Omaha, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Chicago and Minneapolis which show ready markets in all these places for durum wheat. The export demand is strong, but the time should soon come when American manufacturers of macaroni will purchase and use the American product of this wheat at least to the extent of supplying the American demand for macaroni.—Kansas Farmer.

Farming is Changing as a Great Industry.
 There is not in America any man who is more familiar with agriculture as a business than Professor L. H. Bailey, who, for years, has been at the head of the Cornell Agricultural College, and has contributed much to the farmers' sum of farm knowledge. Writing in the Century, Professor Bailey says:

The character of farming is changing rapidly. It is coming more and more to be an efficient, profitable and attractive business. With here and there an exception, in the past we have not given much consecutive thought to the business—nothing like as much as the merchant gives to his business or the doctor to his. It has been so "easy" a business that untrained men could succeed in it. The change in economic and social conditions is breaking up the tradition. Farming is becoming more difficult, and the old methods must go. In the future only the well-informed and efficient-thinking man can succeed; that is, only the educated man.

The country is to offer other advantages to the educated man than merely to be a good farmer. There are good opportunities for leadership on public questions—probably better opportunity and with less competition than in the great cities. The very fact that city representation is increasing in the legislatures should make the able country representative more of a marked man. The growth of the institute movement of the grange and other rural organizations, gives fresh opportunity to develop leadership of a high order.

It seems to me that by the very nature of the progress we are making, the college man must go to the farm. In fact, college men have been going back from the beginning of the agricultural education movement. Statistics show that a very large percentage actually have returned to farming, and this in spite of the fact that cities have been growing with marvelous rapidity, and that the whole system of agricultural colleges and experiment stations has been developing and calling for men. Considering the limitations under which the agricultural colleges have developed, without sympathy, with the indifference and sometimes the opposition of educators—the very men who should have known better—with wholly inadequate funds, it is little less than marvelous what they have accomplished within a generation. It is probable that the proportion of students of the leading agricultural colleges who now engage in agricultural pursuits is greater than that of students of colleges of law or of other professional colleges who follow their chosen profession. No one now questions the value of education to a lawyer or physician; why question its value to a farmer? The educated man will go back to the farm if he is fitted to be a farmer.

Where Ships Were Made.
 The name of Bath, Maine, is inseparably associated with the history of the merchant marine of the United States, and particularly with the American ship-building industry, as that of Pittsburg is with the iron and steel industry in this country, or that of Glasgow with marine construction in the United Kingdom, says the National Magazine. As a port of entry, Bath, which once occupied a prominent position and did a flourishing trade with the West Indies and Europe, has sunk into comparative insignificance, on account of the location of its magnificent harbor so far from the great pathways of present-day American commerce; but as the shipping center, it has retained the prestige won when its ships were on every sea and in every port in the world, in that much regretted ante-bellum epoch, when the American flag was as familiar wherever the commerce-carriers of the sea penetrated as the red ensign of the mistress of the seas. Neither the increasing distance of the Bath shipyards from the materials which they consume, nor the partial change from wood to steel in hull construction, have operated to deprive this staid community of its still unchallenged sobriquet, the City of Ships.

Fifteenth Century Manners.
 The antiquary took down a small, fat volume, vellum-bound, with a brass clasp.
 "This is a 'Book of Manners,'" he said. "It was printed in 1476. Here are a few extracts."
 And he read:

"Do not gnaw a bone, like a dog, nor suck the marrow out of a bone."
 "In peeling a pear, begin at the stalk; but with an apple, begin at the top."
 "Do not wipe the hands on the clothes, nor suck them, but use the cloth."
 "When you drink, lift the cup in both hands; you must not drink with one hand like a wagoner when he is greasing his cart wheels."
 "Wipe your nose and mouth when you have drunk, and do not cough into the cup."
 "Do not eat an apple all alone, but cut it in two and give a neighbor a piece."
 "Do not use your own knife to cut your meat if the host has set a knife of his own at your place."
 "Do not spread butter on bread with your thumb."
