CLYDE A. ROSSETER.

It is with considerable pleasure that one takes up the campaign for candidates such as were nominated at the primary election by the democratic party in Cherry county.

Clyde A. Rosseter, the candidate for sheriff, is a young man of good habits and splendid qualifications for the office. He has spent his life in this western country and is well acquainted with people and the country.

Clyde A. Rosseter.

He was born at Ft. Kearney in the early days when the country was sparsely settled, and when but a small boy his father moved to the Black Hills with the throng and multitudes who went in search of gold when that country became so famous as an Eldorado and fabulous wealth, in store only for him who already had a plenty, lured thousands to endure many privations and hardships of that frontier life, but returned to Ft. Kearney two years later where the family resided until the year 1883 and then settled on a homestead in Keya Paha county, about six miles south of Springview. In 1886 the family moved westward to Chadron where Clyde entered the high school and eight years later graduated from the Chadron academy. The year following he moved to Sheridan county and remained there four years, excepting one year when he was employed by the government as day school teacher on the Rosebud reservation.

It was eight years ago that Mr. Rosseter settled in Cherry county fifteen miles southwest of Cody where he has since been engaged in stock raising. He was married to a young lady whom he became acquainted with in the Chadron academy and is raising a family of children, two of whom are of school age. He bears a good reputation for honesty, sobriety and integrity in the neighborhood in which he lives, and wherever he has lived.

All who know him can testify to that and friends and neighbors, regardless of politics, are supporting him loyally as a worthy and competent man for sheriff of Cherry county.

D. B. JENCKS.

We have made some inquiry as to this man Jencks, who was nominated by the republicans for district judge. We never heard of him before and few of our readers, perhaps, have ever heard of him. To our inquiry comes the following report, though personally we know nothing of him. This is what we hear of D. B. Jencks:

"It is doubtful if there is a lawyer in the Fifteenth judicial district so little known as D. B. Jencks, the republican candidate in the west end for district judge. In 1891 and for some years prior thereto, he was living in Chadron, Nebr., and was not well known, even in the town in which he lived. In 1891 Alfred Bartow was elected district judge, and at the time of his election, was the local attorney of the railroad at Chadron. After Bartow went on the bench, Jencks secured the position and was the railroad attorney for the Chicago & Northwestern at Chadron from that time until Bartow was defeated by Judge Westover. At about that time, Capt. Fischer, who ran for district judge four years ago and was defeated, succeeded in securing the railroad attorneyship from Mr. Jencks, and Mr. Jencks having no practice to speak of, and the fact that the hard times and dry weather with all its discouraging aspects had settled down upon us, he concluded to emigrate. Accordingly, he packed his grip, bid goodbye to Chadron and Nebraska and went west to grow up. He located at Eugene, Oregon where he remained until about three years ago when he returned to Chadron. He had very little law practice during the eight years he lived in Oregon and was never entrusted with the trial of any important cases. However, he did not have to worry about office rent and coal bills like most attorneys with a poor practice, for, during his residence there, an old maid aunt of his died in Connecticut, leaving him $25,000. During his residence in Oregon he spent about all the money which he inherited.

"After the defeat of Capt. Fischer four years ago, at a time when Jencks was again low in funds, he conceived the idea of returning to Nebraska for the sole purpose of securing the nomination on the republican ticket for district judge. His partner, Isaac Harbaugh, at Eugene, Oregon, is authority for the statement, that when the news of Fisher's defeat reached them in Oregon, Mr. Jencks repeatedly said that Fisher's defeat left an opening for some republican to run for district judge in 1907 from the west end of the district, and he believed he could remove back to Chadron and secure the nomination. Accordingly he packed his grip, bade the people of Oregon farewell and came back to Chadron where he has waited and watched with a cat-like persistency for that coveted nomination.

"Mr. Jencks is not a capable lawyer, and the leading attorneys in the west end who know him best, declare that he is not qualified to hold the office, and if elected, he would be unable to do the work on the bench. A carpenter is known by his chips, and a lawyer is likewise known by the number of cases he has. In the three years or more since his return to Chadron, Mr. Jencks has not had to exceed a dozen cases in court.

"Mr. Jencks has no interest in this state, either in land or personal property, and when defeated he will, in all probability, again pack his grip and bid Chadron and Nebraska good bye.

"This, then, is the record of Mr. Jencks, the republican candidate for district judge. Epitomized it is as follows:

"1. He was the attorney for the Chicago & Northwestern railroad at Chadron until he left the state in disgust.

"2. He left the state when the dry weather and hard times settled down upon us.

"3. He came back three years ago when things were prosperous with the sole purpose of becoming a candidate for judge.

"4. He inherited a large fortune and spent it.

"5. He has no property interests in this state, and if defeated, in all probability, will emigrate again.

"Don't you think, Mr. Voter, he should be given a chance to pack his grip and bid Chadron and Nebraska good bye once more?"

Barley, Bread and Beer

These three words are derived from the same Anglo Saxon root—breowan.

All three are foods. Barley, a grain that makes both bread and beer. Bread, a solid food. Beer, a liquid food.

In making bread, flour and yeast are used; in making beer, barley-malt, hops and yeast are used. The same principle is in each—both are wholesome foods.

In Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer the Pabst Eight-Day Malt Process matures the malt slowly and uniformly, thus transforming every particle of nutriment in the barley into perfect food substances.

To these are added the invigorating properties of the choicest hops, by the Pabst brewing process, which insures absolute purity.

Your system requires a liquid. Why not use one that is both food and drink—

Pabst Blue Ribbon The Beer of Quality

The special value of Pabst Blue Ribbon at meals is that it encourages the fluids of the stomach to readier action—thus aiding you to get the fullest nourishment from your food.

You can prove the value of Pabst Blue Ribbon as a food, by ordering a case today for home use.
