Patronize Advertisers.

We would suggest to our readers that they patronize those who advertise and tell your merchant that you read their advertisement in the paper. The people who advertise are helping to pay for your subscription, tho it is seldom thought of that way. A weekly paper is worth about $12 to $15 a year or more, but because people advertise and pay part of the expense the price has been steadily reduced until the common price is now $2.50 or $1.50 a year. Some papers charge the nominal sum of $1.00 which barely covers the cost of the paper and mailing without the home news.

The man who advertises his goods or wares for sale pays a part of the expense of getting out a newspaper for one dollar a year and some people have begun to think that one dollar is all it costs to put out a paper for a year. They do not realize that they get $12 to $15 worth or more for a dollar when they pay in advance. They do not appreciate a paper fully and if an item appears that they do not like they imagine that there will never be anything more that they will like or forget the many good things that they have chuckled over in the past.

Some few persons do have a grievance and stop their paper but there are many people who laugh when they see someone trying to affect being offended or taking offense now at what they would have chuckled over five or six or a dozen years ago. But some people change their minds—some many times. Some people try only to show their disapproval and show it in different manners common to each individual.

People Are Not Angels.

People are not angels. They become impetuous at times. Their minds become centered in some more or less important thing and talk for it, strive for it, fight for it or would die for it while the heat of passion is at its height. Then gradually their minds become drawn aside or turned to some other important matter and they stam pede, so to speak, in that direction.

In the early days kings found great difficulty in keeping their subjects from these stampedes. They invented games to play to draw the mind to peaceful pursuits. They had more trouble than they knew what to do with. Finally, realizing that men were bold and brave, fearing neither the king or ruler, nor their fellow men, nor the terror of being thrown into a den of
