Swinburne's Idea of "Cleopatra." "Cleopatra," which is to be sold with other Swinburne rarities at Botheby's, was described by the poet In a letter to T. J. Wise, as a "trumpery ephemeral," and he added, George Meredith, I remember, strongly (and no doubt justly) remonstrated with me for producing buch a farrage of the most obvious commonplaces of my ordinary styleas it was in '66, or thereabouts. The werses were never intended for reproduction or for preservation, but simply scribbled off as fast as might be to oblige a friend whose work I admired." Mr. Wise, however, was quite content to pay 15 guineas for a coup of the poem, on which Swinburne remarked: "If I were not a bit of a man (Robert Pierpont) at the annual bibliomaniac myself, I should be shocked to think of your wasting good money on it."-London Chron- paper.

A Poor Morto. Baron Takahira was talking to a reporter in Ann Arbor about the Japanese character.

"To say that the Japanese is only a living piece of commercialism is all wrong," he declared. "The Japanese 4s chivalrous and kind. But too often men accuse him of living up literally to the Yorkshire motto. The selfish and despicable motto adopted by a certain hard, narrow type of Yorkshireman is, you know:

"See all, hear all, and say nowt, Eat all, sup all, and pay nowt, And if the does owt for nowt Do it for thysen."

In other words if Spain or Columbia

Engine. It is difficult to say when a gas engine becomes a large gas engine. A few years ago 300 horse power was considered the starting point, then 500 horse power, and now in a recent article published in a German paper 1,000 horse power seems to be taken as the maximum. The list gives the names of twenty-eight makers, nineteen on the continent, four in England and five in the United States. Altogether it adds up a total of 628 engines, giving a combined output of 1,035,709, or more than 1,000,000 horse power in large units.

London Street Beggars.

That the skilled beggar can make a larger sum a week than the average industrious workingman was one of the opinions advanced by the chairmeeting of the London Mendicant Society, says a writer in Reynolds' News-

It was probable, he said, that in the streets of London alone something like £100,000 a year was given away in causual charity by persons who knew nothing about the conditions and circumstances of those to whom they

The total number of begging letters received by the society during 1908 was 1.358, which, with those already in their possession, made a total of no fewer than 238,938. He pointed out that about 28 per cent of begging letter writers were utter impostors and only about 13 per cent were deserving of help.

Mr. Pierpont reminded those present that the society was originally formed by the first Duke of Wellington, owing to the number of beggars who, professing to have served under him at Waterloo and in the peninsular wars, continually accosted him in the street for alms.
