H. W. Funke, principal of Cody schools, was in town last Saturday and tells us that after another week their school will close. Mr. Funk will go back to Blue Hill to spend his vacation and intends to take a post graduate course in the state university, instead of teaching year. He was tendered the superintendency of Newman Grove schools but declined in order to take a post graduate course and take up the study of law.

Two coons were playing seven-up in Kansas City some years ago at 25 cents on the corner when they got into a row and the aggressor was hauled up in police court. The magistrate questioned the complainant, who appeared with one eye in a sling, and declared they were just havin' a good time playin' seven up, when, without warning, the defendant began to hammer him up. The judge turned to the prisoner, asking if he had any defense? "Yes, sir, your honah, you see it was dis ah way. We'd been playin' seven up all day at 25 cents on de cawnah. Aw was down to mah last 25 cents and he had been winnin' stedy all de time. Aw was 6 and he was 2, an' it was my deal. He begged, an' I gin 'im wun. Den he flang his queen an' I played de tra for low; den he flang his king an' I put on de ten; den he flang his ace an' cawght mah jack; den, when he flang his deuce, I hit 'im, jedge. Hit was mah last 25 cents, jedge." The judge dismissed the case.—One of Col. Davis' stories. 15tf

HAS CLOSE CALL WITH DRUNKEN MAN

John Bachelor faced an apparent desperado, or burglar Monday night about 10 o'clock, when he went to his kitchen door in response to a rough and boisterous attempt to enter.

The door was locked, and, as the intruder had tried the door, Mr. Bachelor demanded: "Who's there?"

"Don't make any difference," came the response.

"What do you want?" asked John.

"Forget it," came the reply, and another attempt to force the door.

John went after his sixshooter, and, returning, opened the door, but his visitor seemed to be gone, so John shot out in the darkness and stepped down on the walk to make a search, when, from behind a tree, he was struck over the head with a bottle of beer which came near laying him out, but he rallied and came back with a blow over the head of his assailant with his sixshooter which staggered him and he started to get away.

John doesn't remember any more, excepting that he dropped his gun at that blow, and thinks he struck at him with his fist and grabbed him as he tried to get away.

A few moments later, when Wm. Heelan and Alex Kief came running from in front of the Layport residence next door, they found John sitting straddle of the prostrate form of a man with hands to his throat and calling to his wife, "Don't be afraid, I've got him."

They raised Mr. Bachelor up and he staggered to the house. Then, turning their attention to the other man, whom they supposed to be dead, as he lay there lifeless, they raised him up and he soon rallied and got onto his feet. He was recognized as Earl Holsclaw. A friend came and led him away. His head was cut and bleeding, and, Tuesday morning, as he appeared in Judge Quigley's court in answer to a charge of assault, his face bore the signs of two or three heavy blows, beside the cut across his head with John's revolver. The judge fined him $35 and costs. He claimed to know nothing of the night's doings but pleaded guilty to the charge. He is said to have been on several sprees of late.

The Omaha boosters came into Valentine on schedule time Monday afternoon and made our city buzz like a street carnival for a half hour, taking moving pictures as the parade came up the street and again as the train departed. They also took a moving picture of their train as it crossed the new bridge across the Niobrara, which is 160 ft high and a quarter of a mile long, on the new six-mile cut off. These moving pictures will be shown all summer at the Ak-Sar-Ben den in Omaha and then will be turned over to a prominent film exchange and go the rounds of the country, which will result in much valuable advertising of Valentine.

Col. W. H. Davis and wife departed for their home at York, Nebr., Wednesday morning. They say they are coming again inside of the next six years, and ye editor and wife hope for more frequent visits now that they have learned that Valentine is on the U. S. map. Col. Davis carried away the honors at checkers from the local players and they're all wanting a chance to play some more. They enjoyed the fishing, though the weather was too cool for a good catch. Mrs. Davis claims the honors with the hook and line.

Presbyterian Church.

J. M. CALDWELL, D. D. PASTOR.
Next Sunday morning memorial sermon and services, commemorating the work of the soldiers of the civil war.

It will not be many years that people will be able to listen to the story of this war, from one who participated as a soldier. Hence it is hoped that, not only the old soldiers, their widows and orphans, the sons of veterans will be present but also all others who are appreciative of the blessings saved to the country by their sacrifices. It is hoped that those who own automobiles and teams will bring to church such veterans as may be unable to walk. The church will be decorated with flags and flowers, and special music will be an added attraction.

In the evening will occur the annual baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class from the high school. Seats will be reserved for the teachers and members of the high school and the parents of the graduating class, and in the morning seats will be reserved for the old veterans and their wives and widows and the sons of veterans.

James Marley's sorrel team made a lively run Sunday from Joe Yeast's to the Club stable where they collided with one of Hammond & Bullis' buggies, standing out in front, which stopped the team and demolished the buggy run into. No one was in the buggy when the team started. 15tf

C. W. Bennet is on the sick list, but is improving slowly.

J. C. Reece is assisting with the concrete work on the residence of J. W. Daniels.

Robert Ellis was called to Harrison, Neb., Saturday, by a telegram, stating that his aged mother was very sick.

Mrs. Edythe Latta will close her term of school in district No. 109, May 27. She will leave a district united in their confidence and faith in her as a teacher, and will carry the good will and best wishes of those she has served so faithfully with her wherever she may go.

The literary society gave their play as announced on May 21. They take this opportunity of expressing their appreciation of the splendid audience and the liberal patronage they received. We noticed among those attending, Mrs. Irene Kime, mother and brother of Kennedy; Miss Chloe Waggoner and W. L. Klingaman family of Woodlake. The play was well rendered. All entered into their parts with a vim. J. E. Thackrey did the comic as "Capt. Arnold" to the entire satisfaction of the house. Robert Ellis, as the "Ex-Convict," was plainly a favorite. H. A. Lore, who was under the shadow, carried a heavy part. Mrs. Lore, as the proud wife, was a success. She carried her audience through the various scenes of life with ease and tact. Jennie Reece, as little Mamie, played her part well, with her wreath of roses in effecting the reconciliation of her parents, also won the love and admiration of her audience. E. R. Stillwell, as the servant, was promptly on hand. He had to need for a prompter. J. C. Reece, in white wig and moustache, as the aged father, is entitled to credit for his imitation of a man of 70. Mrs. Edythe Latta, as the charming daughter, rendered her part in a very satisfactory manner. C. S. Reece, as Lieut. Manley, wooed and won the blushing daughter. The society is glad to acknowledge its indebtedness to Mrs. Cook for her instruction, and to Mrs. Ethel and Echo Ralya for the music between acts.
