State of Nebraska, ss

To the heirs and all persons interested in the estate of John H. Miller, deceased:

Witness my hand and the seal of said court this 14th day of July, 1910.

and by all the rules of Nebraska politics I was entitled to a re-nomination without a struggle. Mayor Dahlman has been brought out to defeat me. If he can do it my defeat will be a warning to all future politicians in Nebraska to never dare to stand up against the liquor interests.

The issue between democracy and decency upon one hand and the lawless liberty of unbridled license upon the other is clearly understood by the people of Nebraska, and I am ready to meet the fight along this line. The people of this state are the most independent and intelligent voters of those of any state of which I have knowledge. The petty jealousies and strifes of contending politicians, who are struggling for party control etc., will cut but little figure. A great many more Nebraskans will always be upon the side of the right than upon the side of wrong, but the issue cannot be fogged nor turned aside. He that is not for me is against me. I propose to go on fighting as long as I hold my office, to maintain an administration that shall win the support of the people of this state irrespective of party if I can, to convince them that good government and democratic success go hand in hand. I am a Nebraskan before I am a democrat, but as a member of that party and one who has always contended for its right to rule in this state, I shall continue to strive to fight for those things that I think are essential to good government and to strengthen the party in every way possible, not divide it upon questions that are not vital but to unite it upon great principles such as direct legislation, which carries with it the satisfactory solution of county option and many other questions more important still. What is needed in this state just at present is the decent respect and observance of laws already upon the statute books concerning the liquor traffic, and this office is chiefly concerned with the enforcement of the law. I am willing to leave to the democratic party in its state convention to determine what the future policy of the party shall be in the matter of making new laws.

IN MEMORIAM.

In Greenwood cemetery, N. Y. marking the grave of a scholar cut off in his prime, stands a unique monument. It represents a tree broken midway, with the inscription "My plans were broken off." Such might appropriately be inscribed upon the grave of J. A. Copeland, who died at the hospital at Montrose, Colorado, on June 23, of typhoid fever.

He was born in Fayette county, Iowa, November 15, 1879. He was married in 1906 to Miss Minnie Dickson, of Custer, So. Dak., and began the making of a home in the beautiful valley of the Disappointment. We can picture the hope, the plans, for upbuilding of a home, the varying toil and rest through peace and plenty and naught but "love was law." But these plans were broken off, the young wife sickened and died, the sunshine and song went out of his life forever. Hiding his heart wound, he bravely took up life's battle, and worked and planned to develop and water the desert acres. Expensive machinery had been ordered and plans made for years of consecutive work but the death angel laid his hand upon him and his plans were broken off. He was laid by the side of his wife in Norwood cemetery, June 27, 1910.

Thank God, the meanest of earth's creatures boasts of two soul sides, one to face the world with, one to show a woman when he loves her. The great, busy selfish world saw not the soul side—those he loved saw. Saw not the patience the tenderness, the constancy. Compared with men of coarser fiber, aggressive and self seeking, his gentleness and purity of speech may have been construed as timidity. But not so, he was tenacious of purpose, if he but once marked out the course of duty. Those that knew him best loved him most. The soldier in the trenches sings of Annie Laurie, but bravely faces death. No wonder the poet sings, "The bravest are the tenderest, the loving are the daring." And thus our modest friend could look with unflinching eye into the dark unknown and die with his hand clasped in one he loved.—A friend, in Siebert, Col., Settler.
