The Taylor Meeting.

The speaking at the court house last Thursday evening was fairly well attended, notwithstanding the fact that the first snow storm of the season was announced by threatening blizzard during the day and continued to do so until nearly dark.

The Hon. C. H. Whitney, democratic candidate for attorney general, opened the meeting with a short discourse on the duties of the attorney general as between corporations and the people, then took up the tariff question and proceeded to illustrate the inequalities and injustice of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill.

To many persons present whose minds were, and are, pre-occupied with other issues, this no doubt seemed a dry subject. The speaker anticipated this fact, as was made plain by his opening remarks, yet all men who think will admit that the tariff is an important issue that should occupy more of the public attention in this campaign than the face of circum stances has accorded it, and those present will have to admit that Mr. Whitney hand'ed the subject in a fair, clear, unos'entatious manner that was at once forceful and easily understood.

The Hon. W. J. Taylor, "Taylor of Custer," democratic candidate for congress for the Sixth district, then took the floor and regaled the audience with one of his unique addresses that can be described in no other way, than to say, that as usual, it was "Tayloresque."

But, nevertheless, his argu-

good one. Vote it straight. Democrats will hear cheering news from New Yu k and Ohio on Nov. 9. In out next issue the election of Governor Dahlman will be duly chronlcied.

Senator Burkett is an artful dodger, but the voters will corral him on election day.

It is not safe to presume on fooling the people by the use of trick phrases. The county option coating did not disguise the prohibition pill.

The mud thrown at Congressman Hitchcock only befouled the throwers. The reaction that has set in in favor Remember, we are basing our of Hitchcock is gaining in momentum ia every county in the state.

> A vote for Burkett is an indorsement of the Payne-Aldrich ta iff bill. The Nebraskan who can do this should be ashamed to look his wife or children in the face afterward.

> Senator Burkett put a low estimate on the intelligence of Republican voters in Nebraska when he thought he could serve the trusts in congress and then fool the people into giving him another term in the senate.

A remark commonly heard on the trains and in gatherings everywhere throughout the state is that Burkett did not he'p his case by using Bartley. to divert attention from a record in congress that he could not defend.

If congress did not publish to the world a record of every word spoken and every vote cast by its members, Burkett might have fooled the poeple into giving him another term in the senate. The verdict, however, will be, "Killed by his own official record."

Senator Burkett has shown consummate skill in dodging a debate with either Attorney Whedon or Congressman Hitchcock. But the Congressional digestion, promote nutrition and You may be able to get cheaper Record proved to be too much for him.

The prohibiticalists propose a game of "heads I win, tails you lose." If the county votes "no" on the license question, the cities and towns of the state are put under a prohibitory law. If the county votes "yes" on the license question, matters remain as they now are. Nothing is changed. The prohibitionists merely failed to win, that is all. Therefore, when any person denies that county option is a prohibition trick, he proves one of two things, namely, that he is a wooden head himself, or, he thinks ho is talking to one.

Senator Burkett, stand up! If your record is not what Attorney Whedon says it is, why don't you answer him and show him up as a malicious falsifler and traducer of a faithful public servant? Failing to do this, you should withdraw from the senatorial race. To call him a liar is not enough. He is quoting the pages and paragraphs of the Congressional Record in support of his charges against you. To not refute these charges, is to admit them. We demand that you show that you are right, and Whedon wrong, by the record, or that you quit the race.

Local option as now in force in Nobraska, upon the authority of the most learned sociologists of the world, is the best method that has been tried to minimize the evils of liquor drinking. It leaves the voters of each village and town to solve the liqour question for themselves, backed up by the power of the state which gives the force and effect of law to their acts. When a majority decide that the saloon must go, it goes. The results attained under the Nebraska law put to shame the results accruing from prohibitory | The county is not the social unit of a laws in other states. Yet, there are a set of reactionaries, rampant in the state, who ridiculously pose as moral reformers.

The pharisees of New England, and their echoes, talked about Abe Lincola in 1860 in the same strain that their successors in Nebraska are talking about Dahlman this year. The New England pharisees were sincere in 1860, and bawled out loud in their agony of soul. Some of Dahlman's defamers are sincere, at hough they are planation of the seeming paradox rogardless of party, are so incensed over the campaign of slander against their mayor that they have determined to show their resentment at the polls. Dahlman's majority in Omaha will erceed 10,000.

There is much litigation and diffculty attendant upon the enforcement of laws forbidding the commission of acis that are universally conceded to te wrong. When laws are made forbidding the people to indulge in a social custom or habit to which they have been accustomed, and a majority regard as right, the enforcement of such law becomes impossible. The law is held in contempt by reputable men who connive at its violation. Under such circumstances the law becomes a corrupter of morals, by breeding lying, deceit and perjury. Prohibition is not only a failure, but an abomination until it is put upon the people by themselves, in the social, fundamental, unit of the state, the village, city or town. When the social unit of government, moved from within, enacts a law of this kind, the law becomes a vital force, but not before.

Experience teaches that the evils of liquor drinking are lessened by laws regulating the liqour traffic. Prohibition put upon a city or town from without, whether it be by the county, or the state, means not only an unregulated traffic in liquors, under the ban of law driven, from sight, into the hands of lawbreakers with ten joints where liquor is clandestinely sold against every one saloon that would exist under a high license. Under our present law the majority residing in a town may prohibit liquor selling. It is too soon to undertake to prohibit it until a majority want it done. state, but a group of such social units constituting a subdivision of the state. The county cannot regulate social customs and habits and eliminate the evils thereof any better than a state. Prohibition, without stopping the sale of liquors, is a prolific source of contempt for law, law-breaking, lying, deceit and perjury.

Only those who take a superficial view of things believe that statutes are a cure for intemperance, or are efficacious to remove the desire for unwilling to know the truth. The ex- liquor. The leading psychologists of the world tell us that the mind is the source of man's appetites and desires, and that it is only through the awakening of the moral faculties, and moral growth, that man can be redeemed from his errors and vices. Social habits and customs that have permeated society. from the top to the bottom, since the dawn of history, are deep seated and possess wonderful tenacity. The evils growing out of such cannot be cured by an attempt to prohibit such social custom or habit by law until such time as the people of a community decide for themselves to abolish the evil. Whenever the people comprising the social unit of the state, namely, the village or town, become educated, morally, to a point where a majority will vote to abolish the saloon, it may be safely undertaken without fear that the evils sought to be suppressed will be aggravated instead. Experience demonstrates that local option, under general laws for the regulation of liquor, is the only effective way of attaining permanent good. Gilbert M. Hitchcock is serving his third term in congress, which on the 4th of March next will make six years' service in the lower house of congress. Elmer J. Burkett was his colleague in the house of representatives during his first term, and has occupied a seat in the United States senate during the balance of the time that Congressman Hitchcock has been in congress. The Congressional Record publishes in full the daily doings of congress, including all remarks and votes of every member thereof. Thus, the official record of congress can be produced to settle any disputed point in that record of either a congressman or senator. Mr. Hitchcock and Mr. Burkett are contestants for a seat in the senate where the successful one will represent one-half the voting power of the people of Nebraska upon national legislation for six years to come. Mr. Hitchcock has challenged Mr. Burkett to joint debate and a comparison of records before the voters of the state in order that the voters may have the facts upon which to determine which to prefer to represent them in the United States senate. The voters will be compelled to select one or the other of these two. Why does Mr. Burkett refuse to meet Mr. Hitchcock upon the rostrum when all disputed points between them can be easily settled by reference to the printed record of congress? It looks ments were logical and forceful and left an impression with his auditors, favorable at that the time and one that will still bear further fruits in his favor through the medium of afterthought.

The Hon. John H. Grossman of Omaha closed the meeting with a few 'remarks in the interest of Congressman Hitchcock, Taylor, Dahlman and others. He had at his disposal only time enough to disclose the fact, that under the proper auspices he is an orator of no no mean ability.
