HORSES ARE HER HOBBY.

Millionaire's Daughter Spends Thousands on a Show String.

Horse racing may well be termed the sport of kings, and this is true in more than one sense. It surely takes a kingly purse to maintain a racing stable, whether of runners or light harness horses, but according to some of the largest show exhibitors, both in this country and across the water, the most costly way to indulge one's love for a good horse is to equip and maintain a big show stable and take it around the circle of metropolitan horse shows.

There is absolutely no equable remuneration for the expense incurred in riding a hobby of this kind as the premiums given, even at the largest shows, would be wholly inadequate to defray the outlay necessary for the maintenance of a high class show stable.

One of the largest and strongest stables of show horses in the west is owned by a woman, who directs the care and management of the horses and exhibits her own entries in the ring. This remarkable young woman—for she is both young and attractive—is Miss Loula Long of Kansas City, the daughter of a millionaire, and she spends her money with a lavish hand.

Miss Long's horses, harness, vehicles and appointments represent an investment of many thousands of dollars and she spends thousands more every year keeping her show string in condition and in shipping to the various shows around the country. Last summer she sent her famous horse, the King, to the Olympia show in London, where he demonstrated that he had quality enough to be returned a winner. Miss Long is an accomplished horsewoman and whenever she enters the ring she makes a dashing figure.

Miss Long and her stable of blue ribbon winners will be a leading feature at the coming horse show to be held in Denver by the Western National Livestock association during the week of January 16 to 21. Horsemen from all over the west congregated in Denver during that week and many of the largest horse show exhibitors from the east also put in an appearance.

This year in addition to Miss Long the stables of Augustus Busch, the millionaire St. Louis brewer, Edward B. McLean of Washington, D. C., a young millionaire who has recently broken into the horse show game, Judge William H. Moore, whose horses won more ribbons in London this year than those of any other American exhibitor, and George Pepper of Toronto, will compete at the Denver show.
