accident than any other cause except not trying."

"What do you mean?" asked the playwright.

"Do you know how Sothern senior came in for his first success?" Whiskeys. "Yes; I've heard that story. They say that when he went on the stage as Lord Dundreary he tripped and caught his step. The audience laughed, and he kept it up." "And did you ever know how Milton Ruggles got to be the greet funny man he was?"

"No; I never heard that."

"It was this way: Ituggles when ne first started out took a fancy that he could play light comedy, especially the laughable parts. He had a very droll way with him that took with his friends, and when they learned that he was going on the stage to do that business they all agreed he would make a success of it. So great was the promise that he secured an engagement in a rearing farce and set about studying it. The truth is that a good deal hung on his success. He had married without a cent in the world a lovely girl, and the question was how to live. Ruggles spent week: in practicing the most ludi rous foa tures of his part and when he went on the stage for his debut had done all that study could do to make a bit "I was there.
