Sugar Beet Discuses. At the meeting of the Academy of Sciences, held at the university of Nebraska, Lincoln, December 1, 1900, Geo. G. Hedgeock, Fellow in Botany, described some of the diseases affecting the sugar beet this year in Nebraska. been done by the leaf spot disease, cer-

The greatest damage has apparently cospora beticola sacc. This disease lessens the sugar making capacity of the plant by destroying many or all of the leaves, thus limiting directly the processes of respiration and assimilation. The roots of the affected plants are small and lack in sugar content.

Cercospora is often accompanied by another fungus an alternaria which seems to hasten the blackening and death of the leaves. The effect of this latter fungus is yet to be established. A root rot which may become destructive to beets in silo has been observed. It is caused by the penetration of the cells of the root by the filaments of a fungus, probably those of rhizoctonia betal kuhn.

Mr. Hedgeock expects to continue his investigations, aided by Dr. C. E. Bessey, during the rest of the school year at the university of Nebraska. All sugar beet growers and others interested are asked to send prepaid, material either in field or in silo.

JURY IS STILL OUT.

Disagreement Predicted In the Morrison Murder Case-One of the Jurors. Slightly Ill.

Eldorado, Kan., Dec. 12.-Last night Judge Shinn sent the Jessie Morrison jury to a hotel, directing them to resume their deliberations at 8:30 this morning. The jury was closeted for nearly 14 hours. One of the jurors, Gregory, is slightly ill and needs medical attention. The opinion generally obtains that the jury may take two or three days in reaching a verdict and that it ultimately will be unable to Jessie Morrison was fatigued after the social labors of the day, there having been a constant stream of callers. Besides she had grown a little restless and naturally impatient at the delay of the jury in reaching a verdict. "I have become just a little bit discouraged today," said Miss Morrison. "I expected the jury to reach a decision in about two hours and I expected it to be in my favor. I am still hopeful, but I wish the jury would hurry up," she added, with a troubled

General Chaffee wrote Field Marshal von Waldersee a letter in a rough tone. Field Marshal von Waldersee refused to receive t, returning the same to General Chaffee. The latter then wrote a second letter, apol ogizing for his objectionable expressions, whereupon Field Marshal von Waldersee invited General Chaffee to breakfast and the incident was amicably closed

What particularly hurt the feelings of Waldersee was a pointed reference by General Chaffee to the fact that looting was being indulged in, not by the men who did the fighting and opened the way to Peking, but by the late comers, who had borne none of the brunt of conflict and hardship. Waldersee himself did not reach Peking until long after the expeditionary force had occupied the town.
