

Children's Eyes

are often defective, and they have headaches and other nerve ills which medicines do not reach, and they hate the school room as the devil is said to hate holy water. Have their eyes corrected, and they will not only love the school, but will learn faster.

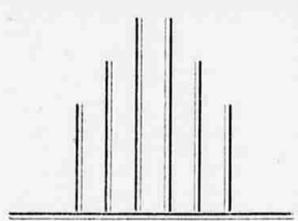

Old folks are often affected the same way, but it shows up in the form of loss of memory, irritability, chronic headaches, and other nervous disturbances, and some times in general cussedness.

Come to me and have your eyes examined. I will tell you why these things occur.

Beet Sugar on the Continent.
During the season 1900 1901 the German sugar factories consumed 12,885,000 tons of beets; next come the French factories with 8,423,000 tons; Austria-Hungary with 7,408,000 tons; Russia with 6,435,000 tons and Belgium with 2,462,000 tons. The eight principal continental beet root sugar producing countries consumed 40,104,000 tons of beets, and produced 5,556,000 tons of sugar.

In Austria Hungary the average percentage of sugar produced from beets during the season was 14.3; in Belgium 13 per cent; in Holland 13.7; in France 12.5; in Germany 14.8; in Russia 13.8; in Sweden 12.8; and in Denmark 12.5 per cent, which gives an average of 13.8 for all the great European beet producing countries. It will be noticed that German beets take the lead, with 14.8 per cent of sugar, while the Danish beets gave the smallest percentage of sugar, viz., 12.5

Pretty Wedding at Home.
The wedding of John H. Featherstone and Miss Nell Shenker took place last evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Shenker, 1211 Douglas street. Only relatives and a few friends witnessed the ceremony.

Shortly after 8 o'clock Rev. F. Newhall White, pastor of the First Congregational church, read the vows which joined the young people. After the ceremony a wedding supper was served. The house was tastefully decorated. The wedding was a very pretty one, although quiet.

The bride is a young woman of exceptional qualities, and her circle of friends is a wide one. She has spent nearly all her life in Sioux City, and has been greatly admired by all who have had the good fortune to be her friends. The groom is a young business man of more than ordinary popularity. He also has grown up in Sioux City and has made a large number of friends. Of recent years he has been a traveling salesman for Knapp & Spencer company and his ability has been generally recognized.

Mr. and Mrs. Featherstone will reside in Salt Lake City, Utah, where Mr. Featherstone will engage in the hardware business for himself. They will carry with them the congratulations and well wishes of more friends than it falls to the lot of every couple to possess. The young couple last evening endeavored carefully to conceal the time of their departure for their new home, but it was generally understood they would leave on the first train.

Among the many presents which were received was a draft for $500 from the bride's father. The groom presented the bride with a piano.—Sioux City Journal.

CORN STALK DISEASE.

Dr. C. A. McKim Discusses Dr. Nicodemus' Experiment and Gives Other Views and Remedies.

Norfolk, Neb., February 1.—To the Editor of THE NEWS: In your issue of Tuesday, January 29, you have an article quoted from the Spalding Enterprise on "Dr. Nicodemus' Experiment," in reply to which on behalf of the qualified and "expert" veterinarians of the state I would like to say a few words.

To begin with Mr. Nicodemus is not a veterinarian at all, and I very much doubt if he would know the first principles of the use of a microscope.

To destroy the poison in the corn stalks which causes the death of the cattle it is claimed by those qualified to give an opinion, that the corn field must be burnt over and not replanted to corn until some other crop, as grass, etc., has been raised on it, so if the germ is thus destroyed by burning how can it be found by the use of the microscope in "the residue left after Mr. Nicodemus burned the stalks"?

As regards this same germ, or poison, being the cause of both the loss of cattle from corn stalk disease and cholera in hogs, it is true both diseases belong to the same class, but the germs are not the same though they resemble each other.

As for the "investigation throwing any light on these subjects," I fail to see it. Mr. Nicodemus does not tell us what this poison is; that it is a poison we have known for a long time, what we want to know is, what is the poison and how to prevent it?

Our United States government and state governments have long experimented with both these diseases and are still doing so, yet they have not so far given us a satisfactory method of dealing with them, as they have done with black leg.

Our own experiment station at Lincoln under Dr. A. F. Peters has done more with the hog cholera question than any other station, and promises soon to do something of still greater interest and value for the stock raiser. In the serum therapy treatment they have already proven the disease can be checked.

If the farmers would obey a proper quarantine restriction, together with disinfection and serum treatment and then a proper mixed ration (not all corn), the disease would soon lose its virulence and it would not go broadcast over our fair state year after year.

The germ of hog cholera can be and is carried from pen to pen and from farm to farm, on the shoes of the farmer, the feet of his horses and cattle, and on the tires of his wagon. All animals dying with the disease ought to be burned, not buried or thrown in a river or creek.

As for the corn stalk disease, the diseased stalks occur in patches as a rule, generally after midsummer, the stalks fail to grow as the ones in healthy areas, the lower leaves die first, they get yellow, then green, then yellow again, and wither away, we see spots around the basal part of the leaf, which is the part wrapped around the stalk. These spots may be from a point to several inches in size (Burrill). They contain the germ which can be cultivated in beef broth or corn juice.

These spots are brown and watery looking at first, then darker and finally dead. In badly affected plants the roots are diseased also.

Later on will occur little gelatinous exudations on the spot on the stalk, which if crushed and placed under a cover glass and examined under a high power, will display millions of germs, and not in the burnt residue.

Dr. Frank Billings says it is a septicaemia due to extra organismal infection of the stalk.

All are acquainted with the symptoms of corn stalk disease in cattle; as for treatment little can be done, but if seen early large doses of raw oil or opium salts and nitrate of potash can be given. Prof. Strangeways says to give sulphate of magnesia eight ounces, quinine sulphate 15 grains, acid sulphuric dilute 30 drops, water 2 pints, mix and give at one dose. It is also well to keep the cattle in the feed yard part or all of the forenoon, before turning into the corn fields.

Since writing this paper I have been informed that hogs dying of cholera are being hauled into Norfolk and rendered into grease or soap. Is it any wonder the disease spreads so?

Respectfully,
CHAS. A. MCKIM, M. D. C.

To be present at the event of the season in any line is every one's desire, but the stage has become so vastly a tope of discussion in the press, pulpit and drawing room that to miss seeing that clever character comedian Mr. Frank Keenan in Mr. Sol Smith Russell's most amusing of all his droll plays "A Poor Relation" would be a loss of a true evening's enjoyment, to say nothing of the pleasure in being up to date in the debate which is sure to follow at all "hot homes," teas and receptions.

A well known and recognized attraction of this calibre should draw a house limited to the utmost seating capacity.

Manager Spear has with no little difficulty been able to secure this famous play, with its complete scenic production and coteries of players. We trust our citizens will reward him with a patronage commensurate with the energy and judgment displayed.

We earnestly recommend to the lovers of clean, wholesome amusement "A Poor Relation" and the advisability to be on hand early at the opening of the advance sale of seats which takes place on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.
