COPTRIGHT, 1900, BY WEATHERDY CHIMNEY AND ALICE MUNBO. ILLIESTRATIONS BY H. G. COULTAS

The day passed and after it most of the night, but just before dawn the re-Hef which I had prophesied came.

Under cover of the darkness Alec had landed his heavy load of men from Galley island on the west shore of the harbor, near to its entrance, but out of cave's mouth. Then he returned to Shelter island and took off Jan Pengony and the others whom we had left there. The two parties joined and, hauling their boat up high and dry, marched with silent haste round the harbor till they came to the flat before the cave. Here, leaving the others am bushed in the thicket, Job Trehalion and Alec crawled through the grass and stalked the sentinels, who, as their fancied security had made them careless, were easily surprised and silenced. Then the rest of the party came up at a run and formed a circle round the mouth of the cave.

The Spanlards, hearing the noise, came out to discover its cause, but aft er some three or four of them had fallen in the scuffle they drew back again into the darkness. Alec thereupon swore that he would smoke them like so many flitches of bacon if they gave him any more trouble, and at the threat they surrendered at discretion.

After they had been disarmed and placed for security, together with the Galley island prisoners, in a convenient aisle of the cave, a small party was left to guard them, and the rest. arming themselves with the captives' arquebuses, made their way to the Temple hill to relieve us.

Completely shielded by the thick un dergrowth and by the darkness, they were able to surround our besiegers and cover them with the arquebuses before they made their presence known. The first indication which Don Sancho and his crew had that they were trapped was the call to lay down their arms and surrender or they were all dead men, and the gallant don, seeing the light of his own watch fire glinting on steel barrels all around him, cared neither to parley nor to fight, but did as he was told. And by so doing he probably saved many lives, both Spanish and English.

Their fancled security had

The long struggle was over, and now the slaves had become masters and the masters slaves. The Spanlards had lost not a few more men in the final skirmish at the cave-for there were bitter and relentless swords against thembut except that the man called Sam had died of his wounds on Shelter is land and lay buried there no more English had fallen. There were 32 of us left and each man ready and able to fight like a bulldog if need be. We had many wounds, but as the poorness of our recent entertainments had kept us all spare of body nature's unaided surgery would soon heal them, for it is only when men are full fleshed and hot blooded that wounds bring fever in their train.

Our prisoners were 122 all told, and to arrange for the safest mauner of disposing of them a council was held as soon as all hands had rested somewhat.

The old man, whose prophecies had brought him great respect, was fiercely anxious to kill them all forthwith, and most of the men, the older ones especially, were inclined to agree with him. Willie Trehalion, however, would not bear of it. He had recovered his skin cap and now rubbed it fore and aft | both." across his bald pate with fierce energy while he spoke.

"No, no, old man," said he; "it's ill counsel you be giving us this time. I'll kill Spaniards with you in hot blood as long as I can stand an never ask for a finer sport, but to butcher them defenseless an unresisting isn't an English sailor's job at all. It's a common hangman's work, that's what it is, an Willie Trehalion bain't going to sully hook or fist by doing it. On the high seas," he added reflectively, "I grant you it's different. There you can blindfold a prisoner an leave the gangway open, an then if so he chooses to march overboard, why, it bain't your fault, an you've no call to bring the ship to an waste time in picking him up. But this that you be wanting us to do, old man, is murder." "Oh, ho, ho! Ah, ha!" laughed the old man. "What dainty gentleman have we here? Why, Willie Thehalion, you with a face molded out of a Portingale orange by four strokes of a marline spike, you with a body as deli-

XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX you that have lost a hand and an eye so prettily, are your feelings become > Willie Trehallon? "Aye," replied the boatswain sullenly, "that's me, if you like, a fighter with the best o' you, but never a murderer.

"What!" cried the old man angrily. made you suffer enough yet? Tender hearted maiden that you are, you will let the wasps regain their nest once more, and then you'll wonder that they come out with fresh venom in their tails to sting you again. Come, Job. tell this dainty uncle of yours how you served the wasp that seamed that purple scar across your forehead."

'Crushed un," said Job, with a grin. "Ever a fool was Job," muttered his uncle to the rest of us, "an now he turns fool's evidence." Job chuckled, and the old man broke out into his weird, unearthly laugh. "Oh, ho, ho! Fools both, do you say, my pretty boatswain? Well, perhaps It is so. Inb here, fool by birth; I, fool by Spanish torture, and yet both of us at times wiser by many a long fathom than every man of you. Never scoff at fools, my masters. The emperor of the Indies has a fool for his vizier, and a motley coat rules half the courts of Europe. Ah, ha, ha! Listen to me now. At times I can be the maddest, merriest, cleverest fool of the lot. I can jest for you, rule for you, cast omens for you, prophesy for you and all without sight of star or burning of mystic charm; but now I do none of these." He hauled himself painful's to his feet and looked round upon them with a gesture of frightful menace. "No, I bid you slay. Slay these cursed Spaniards from commandant to cabin | States and relieve General Merriam in

"Aye," he went on, "if It be murder, I care not. Look at these legs-like two nia, vice General Shafter, retired. gnarled and crushed old willows. Ev-Spanish tortures. See these distorted arms, knotted like a conjurer's handkerchief. Gaze on this body, seamed with fire, scarred with whips and pinchers. Aye, I am a poor cripple now, but a short score of years ago I could have thrashed big John Topp there as easily as he could trounce me now with his little finger. What could give atonement for these hurts? And yet I do not bid you torture these Spaniards in like kind, but only slay them. Slay them!

Slay them! And then-then"-"An what then, old man?" asked the boatswain. "Then." exclaimed the old man flercely, "make me your captain, and I promise you gold beyond your wildest dreams. I will lead you to Manoa." There arose a torrent of voices as he finished speaking. Some declared that Captain Ireland was our leader, and that the old man's words were treason; others that they hated the very name of the golden city, and, while a few called upon the old man to say more. the rest pressed Alec to speak. I joined my voice to these last and by outshouting the others gained silence.

"My lads," he said, "there is not one of us here who has cause to love the Spaniards, least of all I, who have lost a father at their hands, but let us not sully our souls with their murder. No, no; we can do better than thatwe can make them useful. We have a safe prison for them in the cave, and they shall be our slaves. As for Manoa, many of us who sailed to these seas in the Bristol Merchant have spent years in the search for it already, and the prospect of continuing the quest does not tempt us. But Spanish galleons and plate ships litter the main like islands in an archipelago. and every one of them contains treasure. Now, my plain is to make these our quarry, for from them a stout English ship can reap revenge and plunder

"So she should," put in one fellow. But, captain, we haven't got that same stout ship." "We have hands, sirrah," replied Alec, "and some of us brains besides. The wrecks will afford both material and tools, and we have plenty of captive labor to make the work light. There are artificers among us, and I myself have some knowledge of the shipwright's craft, and so I say let us collect our plankings at once and begin to set up the stocks on which to lay a keel. Has any one of you a better plan to offer?"

Shocking Deed of an Insane Mother at Coldbrook, Mass,

AXE AND CLUB ARE USED.

Lava Bodies on the Beds and Then Tries to Take Her Own Life by Cutting a Deep Gash In Her Throat With a Razor, But Will Recover.

Coldbrook, Mass., March 22.-Mrs. Lizzie Naramore, while in a fit of cate and graceful as a side of beef, insanity yesterday, killed her six children at her home, a farm house, half in bloody warfare with these same a mile from this village, and then tried gentle Spaniards for whom you plead to take her own life. The children, three boys and three girls, ranged so nice and finniking that you blench from 10 years to a babe of 10 months and turn sick like a girl at the thought and their lives were taken by the of a don or two dancing the devil's mother with an axe and a club. She sight of the Spanish sentinels at the hornpipe on empty air? Is that you. laid the blood-drenched bodies on the beds, two on one bed and the other four on a bed in another rocm, and then attempted to take her own life by cutting her throat with a razor. When discovered she was in the bed on which the bodies of four children "Will you never learn? Have not their were lying. Although she cut a deep beatings, jailings, starvings, cursings, gash in her throat and suffered the loss of much blood, it is believed she will recover.

Frank Naramore, the husband and father, left his home at the usual hour yesterday morning to go to his work at a sawmill and at that time his wife did not attract his attention by acting strangely. When he reached the house he was prostrated with grief by the loss of his family. Each of the children had evidently received several blows, as their heads were terribly bruised and blood was scattered in all directions. Mrs. Naramore had evidently made preparations for the deed, as the doors were all locked and barred with sticks of wood. She appeared rational this morning and displayed signs of sorrow for the deed she had committed, although she is unable to give any reason for killing the children.

Sopes and Ulceps

That old sore or ulcer, which has been a source of pain, worry and anxiety to you for five or ten years — maybe longer — doesn't heal because you are not using the proper treatment, but are trying to cure it with salves and washes. While these are soothing and relieve pain to some extent, no real, permanent good can come the sound to be a soothing and relieve. pain to some extent, no real, permanent good can come from their use, because the disease is in the blood and far beyond the reach of external applications.

A sore heals promptly when the blood is in good condition, but never if it is diseased. The tendency of these old sores and ulcers is to grow worse, spreading and eating deeper into the flesh. They are a constant drain upon the system, gradually but surely ruin the health and sap the very life. waste valuable time experimenting with them.

S. S. S. is the only purely vegetable blood purifier known; is made of roots and herbs of wonderful purifying properties, which no poison can resist. S. S.
