

MAKE THEIR THREAT GOOD.

Blackmailers Burn a Kansas Farmer's Home.

WIFE PERISHES IN FLAMES.

Husband Fails to Comply With Demand for $5,000 and House is Fired During His Absence—Neighbor Discovers Unconscious Woman.

Topeka, Kan., June 28.—Burned and dying in intense agony was the fate of Mrs. W. C. Carson, wife of a Cowley county farmer, all because her husband refused to deposit $5,000 in a place named by unknown blackmailers.

Word reached this city of the tragedy, which happened Saturday night in an obscure settlement away from postoffice and telegraph stations. Three weeks ago Carson, who is wealthy, received an anonymous note requesting him to bury $5,000 at the foot of a telephone pole on the roadside under penalty of having his house burned. The suggestion was ignored. One week later another anonymous note was received stating that if $5,000 was not deposited within a week his house would be burned and he would be killed in addition.

No attention was paid to the second communication and on Saturday night, while Mr. Carson was en route to Oxford for mail, the home was fired. Mrs. Carson was found about ten feet from the ruins by Mr. Dunn, a neighbor, horribly burned and insensible. She was taken home by Mr. Dunn, where she rallied enough before dying to relate her knowledge of the transaction. She rushed outside when she discovered the fire, but remembered some valuable papers and a treasured old violin, and returned to save them. From that moment her mind was a blank until she awoke in the home of Mr. Dunn.

TWO DROWNED AT WATERLOO.

Walter Evans Attempts to Rescue Fred Fetter and Both Sink.

Waterloo, Neb., June 28.—Fred Fetter and Walter Evans were drowned in R. H. Brown's lake, two and a half miles west of Waterloo, yesterday. Fred Fetter was bathing in the lake and got in deep water and went down. The cries of his younger brother for help brought Evans and Arch Brown to his relief. Evans arriving first, plunged into the lake, which is 12 to 15 feet deep, and in his attempt to rescue Fetter went down.

Arch Brown made a heroic effort to save both and came near being drowned. They pulled him under four times. He succeeded in drawing out Evans, but not before life was gone. Young Fetter's body was found later. The boy was about 17 years old. Mr. Evans was about 28 and leaves a wife.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Sail away,
Hack away,
Plunder! [Boom.]
Gather all the valuables you can.
Come back,
Nothing lack,
Thunder! [Boom.]
Scatter all the money like a man.

The Bristol Merchant's anchor has kissed Severn mud once more, and Willie Trehalion's favorite song, sung, roared and shouted in every variety of voice and key, is rising from the throats of her brown faced crew and compelling attention on the wharfs and landing stages of Bristol city—aye, and throughout the whole town too.

The years of adventure and peril have come to an end at last, and now, before the quill is laid aside and the ugly, uncompromising word 'Fins' is scrawled across the bottom of the last page, a few more dips in the inkhorn will enable Captain Alexander Ireland's brave lads to make their way and march off the stage with ensign and pennants flying. For John Topp prides himself on being too old a seaman to leave the strands of his yarn lying littered about the decks, but prefers instead to see them snugly moused and pointed to an end.

When the Bristol Merchant set out from the muddy Severn to seek adventure and gold in the faraway west, 101 men, drunk and sober, had watched her from the black, wavy line which marked the iron bound coast of Devon until it sank slowly beneath the horizon astern and had then turned, with hearts full of hope, to follow the beckoning arms of the flashing sun as it dipped, all molten gold, into the waste of western waters. It was the beacon which told us that out there beyond the Atlantic rollers lay Manoa, the city whose streets were paved with gold.

Ah, but it lied! That golden glory of the sunset was a will-o'-the-wisp which led all but a few of those 101 brave men to their death. Manoa has never yet enriched by so much as a piece of eight the many bold adventurers who have sought it, nor ever will, for, to my thinking at least, its golden wealth exists only in the hopes of the bold lads which it leads to death. Aye, Manoa is but a dream city, and the story of Job Trehalion's tame pagan was but a Circe song of death.

There are some men who can be happy only when they are doing and daring. To enjoy the rewards of adventure past and peril safely braved is to them impossible. Only sword in hand, and in the sharp grasping of battle do they breathe easily and believe that they really live. Now, I ask no better comrade than such a one to stand by my side when the hot breath of a foe is surging in my face, but ashore, in a tavern, or at supper in a Bristol mercer's house, a man may have a more congenial comrade. Of this restless sort was my sworn shipmate, Alexander Ireland, and before a month's mud and rust had gathered on the Bristol Merchant's anchor dukes, he was at sea again, fighting in Captain Franky Drake's company against the enemies of England and Queen Bess. Job Trehalion spent his prize money in 14 days and then shipped for the Guinea coast, from which he has not yet returned. His uncle, after a shorter trial of dissipation, resolved to eschew the delights of sack and ale and started a tavern to aid him in keeping his vow. The rest of the crew "scattered all their money like men," and then went aloft once more to collect a further supply for the same good purpose. It is the way of sailor men and always will be.

But there is still one person in this tale of whose fate I have not told, and I had meant that there should be half a score more of chapters written to say how I sought her and won her. But she has read all that I have written, and she refuses to form any further part in what she calls my tale of robbery and blood. If I wish to tell how I sought her at Vigo and found that she had gone, and how I finally tracked her to Grenada and stole her, then, says she, I must write another tale of that alone.

She is my wife. I have bought a roll of paper and a score of quills and could write the tale with easy glibness if it were permitted me. But, as I say, Inez is my wife now, and so she must be obeyed.

THE END.

ECZEMA

Eczema sets the skin on fire. The acid poisons in the blood are forced out through the pores of the skin, causing intense redness, burning and itching. So terrible is the itching at times, especially when the body is overheated, that the almost distracted sufferer feels that he could tear the skin to pieces, and that he must scratch or go crazy. He knows from experience that this only makes matters worse, but, made desperate by the terrible burning and itching, he is for the time being indifferent to after effects. There are several forms of Eczema, the moist, or weeping kind, that comes in little pustules which discharge a watery, sticky fluid, which dries and peels off in bran-like scales. So profuse is the discharge at times that large scabs or crusts form, which are both painful and troublesome, and not easily removed. Red, disfiguring bumps and sores are symptoms of Eczema. The dry form usually attacks the head, hands and feet; the skin, becoming hard and rough, often cracking open and bleeding, and attended with much itching. Eczema depends upon a poisoned condition of the blood, and local applications, while soothing and cooling, and may to some extent relieve the inflammation and itching, cannot be considered cures, because external remedies do not reach constitutional or blood diseases. Salves, ointments, powders, lotions and soaps do more harm than good, by smearing over and sealing up the pores of the skin, thus forcing the poison back into the blood. S. S. S. antitoxins and neutralizes the acid poisons and drives out of the circulation all impurities and humors, and the pure, rich blood that is carried to the diseased skin quickly allays the inflammation, opens the clogged pores, and the skin becomes soft, smooth and ready to perform its proper functions. To be rid of Eczema you must first purify and build up the blood, and nothing so surely and effectually does this as S. S. S., the only guaranteed purely vegetable blood purifier. Send for our book on blood and skin diseases, and write our physicians for any information or advice you may desire. Medical advice and book free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

Mr. L. Marno, Escondido, San Diego County, Cal., writes: "My body broke out with a rash or eruption which in spite of all efforts to cure continued to get worse. I had tried many highly recommended preparations without benefit, and a bottle of S. S. S. determined to give it a fair trial, and was inexpressibly delighted when a few bottles cured me entirely, removing every blemish and pimple from my body. I shall not fail to recommend S. S.
