Now that the fusionists have had their say the county campaign may be said to be fairly opened with an exciting finish in prospect.

Prospects for a republican victory on the county ticket this fall are considerably brightened since the fusionists deliberated yesterday.

The festive soda water in an Iowa drug store got in a rage, exploded the fountain and killed a 10-year-old boy. Talk about strong drinks.

The republicans are inclined to think that the fusion convention worked for their success at the polls this fall in an entirely disinterested manner.

The Atchison Glob suggests that the court sentencing Czolgosz might do a very appropriate thing by having the villain electrocuted on Thanksgiving day.

President Roosevelt objects to being the first to institute a method of protection that will tend to prevent assassins from accomplishing their purpose and which at the same time will make the president virtually a prisoner. He argues wisely and bravely that if anyone is determined to kill him they will find an opportunity to do so sooner or later, despite all precautions that may be taken, and doesn't propose to be worried about the matter. Undoubtedly the best plan to prevent such tragedies is to get rid of any class of people that harbor such intentions and take pride in its execution.

Another argument in favor of banks was made at Wheeling, West Virginia, the other day when a five-year-old boy got hold of a sock containing $1,500 of the savings of his parents, which after he had played with a short time, he carelessly threw away and it was picked up by someone who at latest reports had not decided to return it. Ordinary discretion would dictate that such a sum should be placed in a good bank and not allowed to become the plaything of babies.

E. F. Morearty, formerly clerk of the Douglas county court, and later a member of the Omaha city council, is one of the first to desert the fusion ship since the convention of populists and democrats. He announces that in the future he will be found working for the success of the republican party—county, state and national. He was formerly a democrat, afterward joining the populists and rather than return to his first love decided to join the party of progress—the republican party. When leaving he paid his respects to the party in the following epitaph: "Populist party, born July 4, 1892, at Omaha, Neb., died at Lincoln, Neb., September 17, 1901, aged 11 years and 3 months. Cause of death, overdose of democracy."

It is suggested, in view of the fact "the division of the state insane hospitals into three parts for the gratification of local ambitions was a senseless and expensive one," that while Norfolk asylum is being rebuilt it might be constructed with a view to taking care of all the insane patients of the state. This arrangement would place the patients under one management and be a great saving in the expense of caring for the state's unfortunates. Besides it is said that the Lincoln institution is an old building and will have to be rebuilt in the course of a few years and while the state is about it the Norfolk institution could be made a substantial and commodious modern structure. Lincoln's local ambition should be in a large degree satisfied with the capital buildings, the penitentiary, the university and the several other state buildings there. Norfolk would be pretty well satisfied with one of the state institutions. There is no reason why the local ambitions of one city should corner every thing on the market. Norfolk, on behalf of the north half of the state, insists that only fairness is desired.
