

which these three reforms are making and have in part already effected.

The reorganization provided for by the act has been substantially accomplished. The improved conditions in the Philippines have enabled the war department materially to reduce the military charge upon our revenue and to arrange the number of soldiers to as near the minimum number as possible.

There is, however, need of supplementary legislation. Thorough military education must be provided and attention to the regulars the advantages of this education should be given to the officers of the national guard and others in civil life who desire intelligently to fit themselves for possible military duty.

Our militia law is obsolete and worthless. The organization and armament of the militia of the several states, which are treated as militia in the appropriations by the congress, should be made identical with those provided for the regular forces.

The obligations and duties of the citizen in the militia should be carefully defined and a system established by law under which the method of procedure of raising volunteer forces should be prescribed in advance.

The veterans. No other citizens deserve so well of the republic as the veterans, the survivors of those who saved the Union. They did the one deed which left undone would have meant that all else in our history went for nothing.

The merit system of making appointments in the civil service of the United States and American as the common school system itself. It simply means that in clerical and other positions where the duties are entirely nonpolitical all applicants should have a fair trial.

Wherever the conditions have permitted the application of the merit system in its fullest and widest sense the gain to the government has been incalculable. The navy yards and postal service illustrate probably better than any other branches of the government the great gain in economy, efficiency and honesty due to the enforcement of this principle.

The advancement of the highest interests of national science and learning and the custody of objects of art and of valuable results of scientific expeditions conducted by the United States have been committed to the Smithsonian Institution.

The Pan-American exposition at Buffalo has just closed. Both from the industrial and the artistic standpoint this exposition has been in a high degree creditable and useful not merely to Buffalo, but to the United States.

Consular Service. The consular service is now organized under the provisions of a law passed in 1886, which is entirely inadequate to existing conditions.

The consular service is now organized under the provisions of a law passed in 1886, which is entirely inadequate to existing conditions. The interest shown by so many commercial bodies throughout the country in the reorganization of the service is heartily commended to your attention.

The guardianship and fostering of our rapidly expanding foreign commerce, the protection of American citizens resorting to foreign countries in lawful pursuit of their affairs and the maintenance of the dignity of the nation abroad comprise to make it essential that our consuls should be men of character, knowledge and enterprise. It is true that the service is now in the main efficient, but a standard of excellence cannot be permanently maintained until the principles set forth in the bills heretofore submitted to the congress on this subject are enacted into law.

The remarkable growth of the postal service is shown in the fact that its revenues have doubled and its expenditures have nearly doubled within twelve years. Its progressive development compels constantly increasing outlay, but in this period of business energy and prosperity receipts grow so much faster than its expenses that the annual deficit has been steadily reduced from $11,411,739 in 1897 to $2,523,727 in 1901.

The full measure of postal progress which might be realized has long been hampered and obstructed by the heavy burden imposed on the government through the payment of postage on letters, newspapers and magazines.

The Chinese Situation. Owing to the rapid growth of our power and our interests on the Pacific, whatever happens in China must be of the keenest national concern to us.

The agreement reached disposal in a manner satisfactory to the powers of the various interests of commerce and navigation, which will contribute materially to better future relations between China and the powers.

What China Has Promised. Under the provisions of the joint note of December, 1900, China has agreed to restore the treaty of commerce and navigation and to take such other steps for the purpose of facilitating foreign trade as the foreign powers may decide to be necessary.

The Chinese government has agreed to participate financially in the work of bettering the water approaches to Shanghai and to Tientsin, the centers of foreign trade in the greatest North American market, an international conservancy board, which the Chinese government is largely represented, has been provided for the improvement of the Shanghai river and the control of navigation.
