Miss Morrison will probably be content to let a just-to-her-verdict stand the next time. The first time she was tried she received a sentence of five years. This time she drew 25.

The World-Herald's want columns continue to show prosperity indications despite the admission made a year or two ago that the prosperity of the American people was fleeting and that they would soon encounter calamity under republican rule. The demand in that paper's wants is for men and women to work. Those advertising for positions are in a helpless minority.

The farmers of Missouri have been considerably ridiculed for their various idiosyncrasies in time past but the recent census puts them in a light more subject to envy than ridicule. They are wealthy people as a whole. The total number of farms is given as 4,886, valued at $43,879,218. The value of farm property, including cattle, hogs, live stock, etc., was $1,333,121,897 in 1900.

Aguinaldo has been released and announces that in the future he will be loyal to the Americans and their efforts for the betterment of his countrymen. Now if those in the United States who have been opposing the American plans in the Philippines would announce their loyalty to the cause the government would have much easier work in those islands. The late leader of the Filipino cause announces his intention of visiting the 'states' and he may possibly tell some of the doubting Thomases of this country what a noble and generous people the Americans are. Some of them need to be told and shown.

According to the Hospital 5,776 officers and men were killed in action and 2,019 died of the wounds which they received. The deaths from disease amounted to 13,372, and these figures, large as they are, compare favorably with those of preceding wars. There was a high proportion of officers killed and wounded and a high death rate from disease among privates. In action one officer was killed to every 10.15 men and one officer was wounded to every 11.34 men. But of those who died from disease only one in every 38.5 men was an officer. This is partly accounted for by the recklessness with which the men drank polluted water. The number of invalids sent home during the war was about 70,000 and of these more than 6,000 died or left the service. The vast majority, of course, were restored to health. The financial cost of the war will foot up about $1,100,000,000.—American Medicine.

It may be depended upon that when the republican administration proposes a bill to regulate the trusts no demagogic legislation will go. The law will be for business purposes and the trust attorneys will not so readily pick flaws in and find a means of escaping or evading its penalty. The president has shrewd legal advisors at his command and the bill will be constructed with the idea of making every point and provision strong, with a view to withstanding the tests that may be put upon it by lawyers and courts. Latter day intelligence does not expect a law that will be burdensome to either capital or labor and prevent the transaction of legitimate and just business enterprises, but it is expected that it will be a law that will be restraining and controlling, both to capital and labor combinations so that neither may override the needs of the people. Such a law would be most desirable and both capital and labor, of the honest sort, will be benefited and should aid and uphold the president and his advisors in their efforts along this line.

On July 1 the Bureau of Forestry began its field season of 1902, and its work is now being carried on in 30 states. The Bureau has appointed 90 new student assistants for this season, the entire field force numbering 165 men. The work includes, among other things, the gathering of the necessary data for several working plans, a study of a number of well known commercial trees, the examination of farm woodlots, and a study of the treeless areas with a view of devising plans for forest extension. The Bureau of Forestry begins the new fiscal year of 1902-1903 with an appropriation of $291,860. The amount for the year just ended was $185,440. This increased appropriation shows how this work commends itself to congress, and it makes possible a much wider range of work. The present season's work is by far the most varied and interesting yet undertaken by the Bureau of Forestry, and is being carried on in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia, North Carolina, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Montana, Arizona, and California. Later in the season it will be extended to still other states and territories.

When Comes Electricity? At a time when electricity is rapidly transforming the face of the globe, when it has already in great measure annihilated distance and bids fair to abolish darkness for us, it is curious to notice how completely ignorant 'the plain man' remains as to the later developments of electrical theory. Some recent correspondence has led me to think that a vague notion that electricity is a fluid which in some mysterious way flows through a telegraph wire like water through a pipe is about as far as he has got, and if we add to this some knowledge of what he calls 'electric shocks' we should probably exhaust his ideas on the subject. Yet this is not to be wondered at. Even the most instructed physicists can do nothing but guess as to what electricity is, and the only point on which they agree is as to what it is not. There is, in fact, a perfect consensus of opinion among scientific writers that it is not a fluid—i. e., a continuous stream of ponderable matter, as is a liquid, or a gas—and that it is not a form of energy, as is heat. Outside this limit the scientific imagination is at liberty to roam where it listeth, and, although it has used this liberty to a considerable extent, no definite result has followed up to the present time.—Academy.

An Idol With Diamond Eyes. It is a curious fact and one scarcely known outside of Russia, and there hardly ever mentioned, that the famous Orloff diamond was once the right eye of the great idol Serringham in the temple of Brahma. This precious gem was stolen at about the beginning of the eighteenth century by a French soldier who had made a pretense of being converted to the Hindoo religion in order to gain the confidence of the priests and admission to the temple. The Frenchman first sold the diamond for £2,000. On the next turn it was bought by a banker of Constantinople for £12,000. The banker kept it until 1774 and then sold it to the Russian empress for £90,000 and a life pension. The gem has been in the Russian royal family ever since. As it is now set in the imperial scepter of Russia it presents a flattened, rose cut surface and weighs exactly 194 1/2 carats.

Vanity Ticked. During the early excesses of the French revolution a rabble of men and women were rioting in the streets of Paris. Lafayette appeared and ordered a young artillery officer to open fire upon them with two cannon. The officer begged the general to let him try first to persuade them to withdraw. "It is useless to appeal to their reason," said the general. "Certainly," answered the officer, "and it is not to their reason, but to their vanity, I would appeal." The officer rode up to the front of the mob, doffed his cocked hat, pointed to the guns and said: "Gentlemen will have the kindness to retire, for I am ordered to shoot down the rabble." The street was cleared at once, for none could brook the idea of being classed with the scum of the city.

Why He Was Impressed. The following story is told of a garrulous victim of the Johnstown flood of 1889, who when he reached paradise ascended a cloud that served within the pearly gates as a rostrum and undertook to thrill his new made acquaintances among the shades with an account of the disaster through which he had passed. He was interrupted by a gray bearded old man in the group. "A mere bucketful—a mere bucketful!" the old fellow piped. "Don't waste so much time talking of a small affair like that!" The Johnstown man resented this and hunted up St. Peter, of whom he asked, "Who is that old codger who seems to think our flood such a trifling matter?" "That?" said St. Peter. "Why, that's Noah!"
