All the tradespeople closed their doors yesterday morning, clerks, cooks and every class of workmen having obeyed the command of the union, except the motormen and conductors of the electric cars, who refused to join the general strike.

Mob Stones Street Cars. Trouble began early by the holding up of the electric cars by the strikers, whose wrath naturally was directed against the street railroad employes. Several cars were held up and stoned in the outskirts of the city and the passengers were compelled to walk into Havana, among these being the British and German ministers. Several cars were wrecked and some motormen and conductors were infured during the rioting. The carmen, however, continued running their cars until 10 o'clock, when Superintendent Greenwood ordered a suspension of traffic. The employes were willing to remain at work, but the officers of the company, in order to protect the property, deemed it wise to suspend the service. Mr. Greenwood had asked for protection from the civil governor, but the authorities were unable to protect the public wehicles. A mob of strikers drove the men on the Western railroad from the trains during the morning. The mayor of Havana and the secretary of government had during the past week openly sympathized with the strikers and had given orders to the police not to use force in dispersing the crowds, and under these conditions the police were unable to cope with the strikers.

Palma Takes a Hand.

The situation was approaching a critical point at noon, serious disorders having taken place in front of the palace itself, in which a police officer named Maso and a number of policemen and strikers received injuries. when President Palma sent word to the mayor that unless the city authorities could preserve order and protect the railroad company, the state would intervene. The mayor then took drastic measures and issued an edict prohibiting crowds from gathering in the streets and authorizing the chief of police to kill, if such action should be necessary, to preserve order.

A similar show of force early in the morning undoubtedly would have prevented the trouble, but now the strikers had become emboldened and frequent clashes between them and the police occurred in all parts of the city. The police were obliged to charge a mob of rioters at the slaughter house and several among the lat ter were injured. The vigorous attitude of the police now made itself felt and traffic on the car lines, which had only been suspended for a brief period. was resumed and was continued from this time forth, with only occasional Interruptions. Most of the injuries sustained by the strikers were caused by the policemen's clubs.

The Central Veterans' union, headed by General Gomez, held a meeting in the afternoon and sent word to the labor union that if the disorders continued the veterans would offer their services to President Palma to preserve order. No bread or meat was on sale yesterday and a continuance of the strike will cause much suffering to the poor.
