"You are a worthless nigger, George." "Yes, little mistiss."

"And your master and I will have to go to the almshouse." "Yes, little mistiss; spec yo' will."

"Then what will become of you, George?" "Go dar too."

"Do you think they would take in a nigger? You are more likely to get on the chain gang."

"Te, he, he, little mistiss!" "What are you giggling about?"

"Dev ain't no chain gang. We goes on de fahm.

"You have been there?" "Yes; I got seut dar 'bout a yeah

"George, have you been a criminal?" His mistress looked at him with shrink-"Spec I has," he returned glibly. "I been mos' eberyt'ing-crap shooter, buck dancer an' de res', an' crimnel," he added, with a touch of pride. Mrs. Custis was paying no heed to the negro now. She looked dreamily out through the window at the mellow sunlight of spring. A longing came over her for her old home. She had endured the long and cruel winter with a stolcal patience, but the reluctant spring made the sap of yearning rise in her veins. Suddenly she buried her face in her handkerchief, and like a faithful dog George began to whine:

"Dar, little mistiss; Jes' yo' wait till de udder side de cloud flummux over, an' yo'll see 'nough silver to mek a braid pan."

"Oh, go away, you worthless nigger!" Mrs. Custis exclaimed, putting down her handkerchief, and he jumped extravagantly just for the delight of hearing her sweet old laugh, like the ringing of pure thin silver.

"But, George," Mrs. Custis resumed, with renewed dignity, "it is true that your master and I are seriously think-Ing of seeking public assistance." Her delicate cheek flushed at the admission; but, seeing his look of childish horror, she proceeded firmly:

"As simple as our living expenses are, we cannot longer meet them, and we must ask for help.'

She threw up her little figure and proudly left the room, but she stumbled on the threshold, and the negro, with intuitive devotion, knew that her eyes were blinded with tears.

He stared with a dropped jaw at the open door through which she had gone. Then, with a volatile grin, he jumped to his feet and, performing a skillful clog dance, seized his disreputable hat and bolted from the house.

About a year before this Mr. Custis and his wife had drifted to the great city of New York. They came from Georgia, leaving their home desolate in I was a perfect little cat, Dick, and"order to be near their daughter, who had married a clever young artist. It did not take the parents long to discover that their son-in-law had difficulty in supporting his little family, so they, protesting grandly that they had an ample income, moved to a cheap little flat on the east side and in the frightful closeness of a few narrow rooms began an existence that was slow torture to their pride.

One day George Harries, one of the most unregenerate negroes in all New York, sidled up on their front steps and pulled the bell. A negro is not naturally a tramp, but he was idle and thought he could bully something from these forlorn old people.

Mrs. Custis opened the door and look ed her wrath at his presumption. "Does yo' hab any wuk fo' a po' cullud man?" he drawled insolently. "No; I don't want any niggers to work for me!" she blazed out. "Get off my front steps!" She was preparing to slam the front door when he jerked off his filthy hat and burst out:

"'Fo' de Lawd, I didn't know yo wuz a south'n lady; 'deed I didn't, lit tle mistiss. Kin yo' give a po' niggah a bite o' somethin' to eat, an' I'll wuk my fingahs to de bone; 'deed I will." And that was the beginning of a strange household -- George Harries, crap shooter, low comedian and natural singer and dancer, and these poor, fine old southern people. And he was as faithful as though he was their slave-they as autocratic as though he was theirs by right of purchase.

So on this sunny afternoon in spring he shuffled along the street, dipping into old haunts that had not known him for a year. When he reached one of his former stands, he looked shrewdly about for a policeman and, not seeing one, began with great vigor and skill what is known to the initiated as a "buck dance." By the time he had danced for five minutes the crowd was so dense about the performer that it took a tall man to peep over the heads.

George paused in his dancing, took off his hat and, singing in a musical voice, "coon, coon," went around collecting. This was all very well, but a policeman sauntered up. Finding the attraction was a live negro and not a dead horse, he virtuously redistributed the coins to the amused crowd, and George took a free ride to the police

By the time he was hustled before the desk his most reckless look had settled over his hardened face. The magistrate, who was looking bored, roused slightly when the officer explained that the negro was indulging in a disorderly dance.

"Why were you dancing?" be asked, with a yawn.

"'Cause I wuz," was the sulky reevit flying. It has been nearly a year since you were arrested." A subtle change passed over the home> ly features. 'Deed, boss," he stuttered, "I been livin' all right an' wuzu't doin' nothin' today 'cept a little dancin'. I ain't shot no craps in a yeah mos'-no, sah. 'Deed, jedge," the fellow suddenly blubbered, "I don't know what my po' ole marsier an' mistiss is gwine to do if you sen' me down. It wuzn't fo' me I wuz dancin'; it wuz fo' dem-fo' Gawd it wuz. Dey's quality folks, an' dey'd sta've befo' dey'd baig.'

"That's a likely story," began the policeman contemptuously. The magistrate motioned him to be quiet as he said more kindly: "George, suppose you show me what sort of dance this was." The negro's face broke into sudden smiles. Like so many of his race, he had a childish smile and beautiful teeth. He stepped forth willingly, and it was a pleasure to watch the posturing and gestures so absolutely African and yet dramatic.

The magistrate watched him intently. When he had finished and leaned panting against the desk, his honor shot a sarcastic look at the policeman and rapped out, "Case dismissed."

George lost no time in putting the police station behind him. He was hustling along toward home when a sharp faced, theatrical looking man overtook him and briefly explained that he had seen him dance and wanted to engage him for his company of minstrels.

George had been in New York too long to make an easy bargain, and at last the theatrical manager reluctantly came to his terms. George even got an advance on the strict promise that he would report that night for orders. Then he flew over the ground to the Custis flat.

He fell up the steps and burst into the kitchen, where Mrs. Custis was cooking a meager supper.

"Law, little mistiss," he ejaculated, not forgetting to pull off his hat, "'deed de Lawd has flummuxed dat brack cloud over, an' dar's some o' de silver linin' right dar." And he triumphantly gave her $5.

Then he told how he got the money. The poor old lady's tears were streaming and he himself was sobbing like a Central's Vindication. They had quarreled overnight, but she had no sooner reached the studio where she was preparing to threaten the laurels of the old masters than she was called to the reconciliatory telephone. The conversation began guardedly with the customary: "Is this Miss E.? Oh, good morning. This is Mr. F." But in a few seconds these perfunctory words gave place to others.

"Helen," he declared, "I was a beast," And she replied contritely: "You must not call yourself names. I was horrid. But Mr. F. could not stand her sel reproachings. He told her that he could not and that he would not bear to hear most noble woman in the world. "Hush, hush-sh, Dick," she entreated. "We're forgetting that a telephone is not so awfully secret. Suppose Cenher slander the dearest, most generous, tral should hear?" Whereupon a strident voice took up the tale. "Central!" it sneered. "Central listening! I like that! Central's got something else to do but listen to the lovemaking of a pair of idlots. I can tell you that I've got other fish to fry besides paying attention to the like of that truck!"-New York Herald.

Who Invented the Steam Engine? The Marquis of Worcester, while imprisoned in the Tower of London in 1656, invented and constructed a perfect steam engine and had it publicly exhibited the same year at Vauxhall in successful operation. Thirty-four years later, in 1690, Dennis Papin added the piston to the marquis' discovery. In 1698 Captain Savary devised and built a steam engine different in many details from those made by Worcester and Papin, and in 1705 Newcomb, Cawley and Savary constructed their celebrated atmospheric engine, which was complete in every detail. The above array of historical facts notwithstanding, James Watt, who was not born until sixty years after these great men had given the steam engine to the world, enjoys the distinction of being the veritable inventor, originator and author of the most use ful contrivance of the present day.

Fulton, who lived and worked in the early part of the century, is given the credit of being the man who demonstrated that steam could be applied to navigation; this, too, in face of the well known historical fact that De Gary propelled a vessel by steam in the harbor of Barcelona in 1543.

Greatness Not Free From Shame. The transcendent power and fame with which great genius has at different periods endowed various men do not always insure them from after misery and shame.

This was strikingly exemplified in the cases of the four greatest of military conquerors-Alexander, Hannibal, Cæsar and Napoleon. The general judgment of mankind has conceded them the first place in the lines of action for which they were severally distinguished. Yet they all met with melancholy and tragic deaths.

Two of them suffered for years the keenest humiliations which a total destruction of their hopes could bring. Two perished at the zenith of their power, just as they might have expected a long enjoyment of the fruits of their tremendous achievements.

NATIONAL BOARD OF TRADE.

Reciprocity the Topic at the Washington Convention.

Washington, Jan. 16.-The annual convention of the National Board of Trade came to an end yesterday. The president received a number of the delegates in the forenoon. The question of reciprocity was probably the most important topic introduced yesterday. Resolutions urging the negotiations of treaties were adopted.

The report of the committee on immigration laws, submitted by G. Waldo Smith of New York, was adopted. It urged on congress the importance of prompt and favorable action to prohibit undesirable immigration by means of such educational tests as might seem best adapted to that end and also favored a more stringent naturalization law.

A. T. Anderson, for the committee on postal affairs, submitted a report, urging on congress the prompt adoption of a universal 1-cent domestic letter postage. The report was adopted unanimously.

The convention also adopted a resolution introduced by Charles England, president of the National Hay association, requiring the official southern and western classification committees to provide for and place in use a uniform bill of lading, wherein is clearly stated the rights, duties and liabilities of all parties affected by the shipment.

UNION FOLLOWS OLD RULE. Restriction of Output Was in Effect

Before Miners' Organization. Philadelphia, Jan. 16.-Most of the testimony presented to the anthracite coal strike commission yesterday was of a corroborative nature, the Erie company producing numerous witnesses to prove that the miners' union is responsible for the alleged restriction of the hard coal production. The fact was adduced, however, that the practice of restricting the number of cars to be loaded daily by one man had been in operation as far back as walk or run and 5,000,000 more never 1895, long before the United Mine Workers of America entered the anthracite region. The majority of the witnesses were mine foremen, who testified that the union was detrimental to discipline at the collieries, Cubans show a semisavage preference for such music as is made by a sort of band composed of a stamp mill sort of a crank plano, a pair of sugar kettle tomtoms and a man with a horseradish grater called a "giro" and a flat file with which to scrape it, the combined outfit producing a discordant potpourri that might easily dislocate the teeth of any self respecting handsaw. This example of music, as the Cubans fancy it, is even worse than the finger drumming and wire snapping musical murders committed in Tunisian bazuars and Algerian cafes chantantes. The lauded but lugubrious Cuban national hymn is best esteemed when performed by one of these bands of inharmonic banditti, and the national dance, that monotonous combination of motions that suggests that the dancer is trying to shoo a flea off the small of his back and also go easy on a stone bruised heel, can only be adequately performed to the music of those African agitators of catgut, rawhide and perforated tin. The truth is the Cubans will have to learn music all over again.

Bables. A baby is born at every beat of the human heart. That is more than one for every tick of the clock. These "living jewels" (as the poets call babies), "dropped unstained from heaven," take wings and fly back whence they came one for every minute of the day. From Jan. 1 to Dec. 31 between 38,000,000 and 40,000,000 living jewels are dropped into this cold world.

There are more baby girls than boy babies. The proportion of female births to male births is as 100 to 90. So that between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 more girls are born in the world each year than boys. There is always a surplus of women, and the extra number of girl babies keeps up the supply.

The rate of infant mortality is enormous. In round numbers, 5,000,000 babies never live long enough to talk, 5,000,000 more never have a chance to get old enough to go to school.

How a Snake Swallows a Frog. The method of swallowing is a very simple one, although if the frog be large more than half an hour may be consumed in the process. The two bones of the lower jaw are separate and capable of independent movement; so the reptile loosens its hold upon one side of its jaw and pushing that side forward as far as possible it drives the teeth in again and draws the jaw back to its original position.

The result is that the prey is drawn down by the movement. The process is then repeated by the other half of Omaha, Jan. 16.-President Burt of the jaw, thus inevitably forcing the the Union Pacific railway has refused victim inward. The snake's skin sooner that two or three weeks at the of course dislocated, but the extensible ligaments hold the bones together.

As Good as a Compass.

The compass plant of Asia Minor, known all along the eastern shores of the Mediterranean and as far east as Coal company at their mine near here Arabia and Parsia is mentioned in the struck yesterday, alleging the com- Bible, where the prophet refers to "that senseless thing which is more stable than man, inasmuch as it always salve. He says: "I had the piles for pointeth in the one direction." It is 20 years. I tried many doctors and an annual shrub, much resembling our wild or false indigo, but with all the branches arranged along its stem on the north side. It is of the greatest value to travelers of those regions, who use it with as much assurance of being carried aright as does the seaman his mariner's compass constructed on the latest scientific principles.

A DESERT CARAVAN.

were the last words, instructions, cautions, adleus, and then Abdullah held up his hand. All gave the cry of the camel driver, and the uncouth beasts, twisting and snarling under their loads, struggled to their feet.

Another cry, and they began their voyage. They traversed the square, passed the mosque, turned down a narrow street and in five minutes crossed the line that bounded the oasis and entered upon the desert.

Immediately the dun leader took his place at the left and slightly in advance. The fourth on the right of the dun was the black racer. He carried two water skins and Abdullah's saddle. Then came in ranks fifteen camels, All riding in the center. On the right flank rode the two women, with enormous red and white cotton sunshades stretched behind them; then at an interval of six rods came fifteen camels unattended. They simply followed the squad in front. The dun leader and the black racer had lanyards about their necks. The other camels had no harness save the surcingles that held their loads.

In a panic, a sandstorm, a fusillade from Bedouins, a mirage and a race for water, if Abdullah and Ali could grasp these lanyards the caravan was saved since the other camels followed the dun leader and the black racer as sheep follow the bellwether.

Abdullah walked at the left, abreast of the dun. At intervals he rode the black racer.

The pace of a caravan is two miles an hour, but Abdullah's, the two cripples included, could make two miles and a quarter. The black racer could make sixty miles a day for five days without drinking, but at the end of such a journey his hump would be no larger than a pincushion, and his tem-

LOOK OUT FOR ATARR

The cold-wave flag means zero weather, ning of winter in earnest. To Catarrh sufferers there is nothing cheering in these climatic changes, for with the return of cold weather, all the disagreeable symptoms of Catarrh appear: blinding headaches, dizziness, a stuffy feeling about the nose that makes breathing difficult, chest pains, and as the disease progresses, a discharge of nauseat-ing matter from the throat and nose keeps one continually hawking and spitting.

Catarrh is a most disgusting disease. The foul mucous secretions that are constantly dropping back into the stomach contaminate and poison the blood and is distributed throughout the body, and it then becomes a deep-seated, systemic, persistent disease that must be treated through the blood, for it is beyond the reach of sprays, washes, powders or ex-ternal treatment of any kind.

S. S. S. soon clears the system of all Catarrhal matter and purges the blood of the irritating poisons, thus effectually checking the further progress of this serious and far reaching disease.
