Arkansas opened the cyclone season a bit early, but the work was as effective as though there had been months of preparation.

When Northern Securities stock takes a tumble from 106 1/2 to 103 on the New York market immediately on receipt of news of the decision, critics of the administration cannot but admit that the course of the government means something more than an attempt to fool the people with the appearance of an attempt to do something against the trusts. Hill, Morgan and others realized what the result would be or they would not have devoted so much of their time, energy and influence to an attempt to divert the president and his officers from their purpose.

The legislature has adjourned after accomplishing a remarkable amount of work and passing measures that it is hoped will prove of decided advantage to the people of the state. The revenue law adopted is easily foremost in importance and if it provides sufficient revenue for the running of the state government without adding too much to the burdens of those who have heretofore done a large share, the people will have cause for congratulation. A number of other important measures were passed and by the time another legislative session it is to be hoped that the state will be found in better condition financially and otherwise than it has been for many years. This was the objective point of the late session and it is believed that a large number of the measures adopted by it will be effective.

The decision against the Northern Securities company by the circuit court of appeals is a decided victory for the federal government and effectually sustains the present anti-trust laws. It was President Roosevelt, through Attorney General Griggs, who brought action against the merger proposed by this company, and credit will redound to the administration although it may be expected that the Hill, Morgan and other interests will seek to discredit the president and his officers because of the disadvantage to them of the decision. If the supreme court will now sustain the decision of the court of appeals there will be a precedent that may be used in the effectual control of all combinations and trusts in restraint of trade. With the policy of the president sustained it will stand other trusts and mergers in hand to get out from under in the best and most graceful manner possible. The people will be delighted to know that the day of gigantic combines is past.

When Senator Hanna said that the only man to stand in the way of President Roosevelt's nomination and election next year was Theodore Roosevelt, it is probable that he meant to convey a delicate hint to the president to keep his personality in the background. But it is doubtful if the hint will be of effect. President Roosevelt has never yet occupied a position in which he found his personality a disadvantage and he has not yet subordinated it as chief executive. It is that personality that the people love and admire, and it is that which will renominate and elect him if the people are able to dictate the course of the convention and the election. It is that personality that has ever been prompt and vigorous in upholding the policies that are of advantage to the people. His is now in a position where that individuality can be of the broadest benefit and the people do not wish it subordinated and furthermore believe that it would be impossible for the president to hold the office without permitting his character to shine out clear and bright.

The Vultures.

The question is mooted whether the vulture knows of its quarry by sight or smell. How does it communicate the news of a feast to its fellows? A tiger had been killed.

Colonel Ramsay ordered the carcass of the skinned tiger to be dragged out from under the thick mango trees into the open. Taking out his watch, he asked us to make a guess as to how long the vultures would take to clean the flesh off the bones. Some one said half an hour. As there was not a vulture in sight, this seemed even better, but Colonel Ramsay gave them ten minutes, which proved to be correct. There was one vulture at first seen soaring round and round very high up in the cloudless sky. He closed his wings and dropped on to the carcass with a swoop. In two minutes the sky was full of vultures, all concentrating from every side on the spot, and arriving with all the impetus their drop from a great height gave them as fast as it takes to tell the story. Then there commenced a frightful scene of literal carnage, every one tearing with sharp, hooked bill at the entrails first, then at the flesh, all fighting for room to get a piece and tumbling over one another with frantic haste. "The Forests of Upper India and Their Inhabitants," by T. W. Webster.

What Holds the Novel.

Frank Norris, author of "The Octopus" and "The Pit," was a most virile writer and a man of decided opinions. He was wont to say of the great factors in molding public opinion that "the pulpit speaks but once a week, the press is read with lightning haste and the morning news is waste paper by noon; but the novel goes in the home to stay."

This opinion was aired by Mr. Norris in the lobby of a hotel in a small town in Illinois. Among those present was a country editor, who was prompted to remark that the novelist's views reminded him of his dog Wolf. Wolf persisted in running away from home, killing chickens and annoying children in the community. At last a method was adopted by which the dog was confined to his own homestead.

"Chained him, eh?" was the thought voiced by several of the company.

"Yes, sir," declared the editor. "And if your modern novel goes into the home to stay let Wolf remind you that it's on account of the binding."

Political Economists.

While great fortunes and great industries have almost invariably been created by uneducated men, parvenus unembarrassed with learning, who taught themselves what they found necessary to know, we find, on the other hand, that those men who have made commercial science, political economy, their study have not shown any success in business and have remained theorists. Most political economists have had to live on their pen. Mr. Cobden went bankrupt in business. It is true that Ricardo was well off, but he was a stockbroker by trade, and with him political economy was only a hobby, not a serious result. It is strange how few business men of the first rank have a good word to say of political economy.—Nineteenth Century.

Good Paste.

Not every man can make a good flour paste that can be preserved without decay or mold. When such a paste is needed, try the following: Mix good, clean flour with cold water into a thick paste and continue mixing until the flour and water are well blended. Now add boiling water and stir until it is thin enough to spread with a brush. Add to this a spoonful or two of brown sugar, a little corrosive sublimate and a few drops of oil of lavender and you will have a paste that will hold with wonderful tenacity.

In Holland.

Many of the country dames and damsels in Holland look as if they had been brought up on soap and water. Their faces glisten so preternaturally, their pots and pans, the red tiles of their floors, their tables and benches all bear witness so unmistakably to their cleansing ardor. I suppose a fly in the butter they were churning or a mired foot on the boards they have but just scrubbed would be as nearly likely to give them a fit as anything could be.—Chambers' Journal.

THE MARKETS.

Yesterday's Quotations.

Chicago, April 9.—The wheat market experienced another day of manipulation and prices had a strong upward movement, May closing 1/2c higher. The Armour buying was again the factor. May corn was off 1/2c and oats were down 3/4c. Provisions were easy, the May products closing unchanged to 1/2c lower. Closing prices:

GUN BURSTS ON IOWA

Tons of Metal Tear Through Decks of Battleship.

THREE MEN KILLED, FIVE HURT.

Shell Jams and Explodes Before Ejection, Tearing Off Twelve Feet of Cannon Outside of Turret—Gun Weakened by Much Use.

Pensacola, Fla., April 10.—A disastrous explosion occurred on the battleship Iowa while the vessel was at target practice in the gulf. The forward port twelve-inch gun burst from a premature explosion of a shell, twelve feet of the piece outside the turret being demolished. Gunner's Mate Berry and Seamen Kiele and Percell were killed. Seamen Gough, Thursdale, Brown, Measdale and Forkde were seriously injured.

The men killed and injured were on the second deck, at mess. The exploding gun weighed over a ton. The pieces passed through the deck, instantly killing the three men. The heavy missiles passing through the gun deck, continued down through the third deck, where they came in contact with the armored deck, the heavy steel bringing them to a stop, thus saving the engineers and firemen who were at work below. Although the upper decks were covered with men, none was seriously injured.

The explosion occurred just as mess had been sounded. The firing was to have ceased after the shot for dinner hour. The range had been set and the Iowa was steaming along at a speed of twelve knots when the officer in charge of the twelve-inch turret gave orders to fire. Following the report of the gun there was a smothered noise as the shell exploded midway in the gun and pieces of the bursted gun and shell were scattered broadcast. Three great holes were torn through the deck. The Massachusetts, six miles distant, was signalled for aid and one of the cutters put off with the surgeon and assistant surgeons. The injured men were taken to the hospital and their injuries dressed. The dead were brought to Pensacola. Some claim the explosion was caused by a defective shell, and others think that the frequent firing of the pieces at Culebra during the winter, added to the work done by her during the past ten days, so strained the piece that the force bursted the gun.
