THE SUN CAME OUT AGAIN.

Long Spell of Gloom Has Been Broken a Bit.

[From Thursday's Daily.]

The sunshine, the warm, radiant, cheerful sunshine, has finally melted the lock that held it fast up behind the clouds for so many, many days, and the yellow glow of the good old summer once more brings joy to the heart of

The break in that monotonous and seemingly everlasting gloom that has held cities and people tight within its disconraging grasp, came yesterday afternoon and proved, beyond a doubt. that the weather prophet who claimed the spell would last for two weeks more, knew nothing at all about it. Last night the man in the moon came back to earth and the heavens this morning fairly opened up.

As a result of the change, muddy streets are drying up, farmers are coming to town, hammers are rapping with a swifter knock and life, once more is worth the living.

A black, ugly cloud that overhangs the city this afternoon threatens a shower, but it is merely a shower and not a prolonged drizzle.
