A SMOOTH FAKE IS NIPPED

Farmers Around Norfolk Have Been Victims.

CLEVER GANG OF IMPOSTERS.

S. A. Shields, Claiming to Represent the "New York Hospital Co.," of St. Joseph, Had Grafted Many Promissory Notes When Exposed.

A smooth medicine fako operating in the vicinity of Norfolk during the past few weeks, and by means of which a large number of farmers had already been "taken in" for amounts ranging between $10 and $200 apiece, was nipped just in time yesterday morning to save a successful completion of the graft. The game was unearthed at the Citizens National bank and the fakir, S. A. Shields, together with two assistants, left the city on the noon train. Just before his departure, Shields surrendered a note given him by one of the prominent farmers north of Norfolk for $195.

Shields and his gang claimed to represent the "New York Hospital company," of St. Joseph, Mo., a fictitious firm. They took orders for a series of home treatments, promised to ship the medicine and received notes in payment. They were clever talkers, swell dressers and persuasive to a degree. The game worked admirably well and not a few of the level headed farmers approached, fell into the trap and signed their names to promissory notes for heavy amounts. It was through the extraordinary large amount secured from one well-to-do bank patron, that the Citizens National people accidentally discovered the game.

Shields had gone into the country and persuaded a farmer of means that he would doubtless die if he failed to take medicine put up by the New York Hospital company. The farmer gave a note for $195 and accompanied Shields to the bank to give assurance that everything was straight. The bankers called the farmer into the rear room and asked him if he was perfectly sure he knew what he was about. When they returned, Shields was rather angry at the interruption of his affairs.

"We've decided," said Assistant Cashier Pasewalk, "that we'd like to telegraph St. Joseph and find out that your firm is all right." Shields was apparently satisfied with this, and agreed to pay the bill. Then he left the bank and took a noon train for Battle Creek.

Meanwhile the bank had wired an inquiry to the hospital and incidentally to the Tootle-Lemon bank, asking as to the firm. Within forty minutes a reply came from the bank stating that there was no such hospital company. Late in the afternoon a message came from "The New York Hospital company," stating that S. A. Shields was their authorized representative. Something was evidently wrong.

The next morning Shields returned. "Did you hear from the message?" he asked.

"Yes," replied the banker, "we did." And a smile of satisfaction appeared upon the imposter's face, as he drew his notes out to be cashed.

"We heard from St. Joseph, and we'll be unable to do business with you," the banker continued. Shields demanded an explanation, with a brazen bluff, and the two telegrams were produced.

Gives up the Game.

With proof positive that his game was up, the medicine man gave in completely. "I'm all in," he admitted, "you're too many for me." He admitted that he had gone to Battle Creek and wired to a friend, instructing him to answer in the name of the firm. "I've learned something," he said, "and the next fellow won't catch me that way." "Well," he went on, "it's just a game that we're all playing at, and this time you've beat me at it."

Diamond His Salvation.

Then the bank demanded the note, to prevent its sale elsewhere, and Shields reluctantly gave it up. With all of his prospects gone the grafter was in a tight place, for he needed money to get out of town. He claimed that he had a deposit in St. Joseph and a message upheld his statement, but there was no one to identify him and he was playing in hard lines again. A huge diamond ring which he wore, was Shields' final salvation. It was a mammoth stone, beautifully cut, and proved to be a perfect one. Glancing at this, Mr. Pasewalk offered to take it as a forfeit on a check. An instant later the ring had changed hands and Shields was enabled to liquidate at his hotel.

The stone is valued at $140 and is to be returned to Shields when he returns the $75 that went on the check.

He and his two confederates left yesterday at noon for greener fields.

TRANS-CONTINENTAL GATEWAY.

A New Book Descriptive of Omaha Isued by the North-Western Line.

One of the most attractive railroad publications that has been seen in quite a while is the booklet descriptive of Omaha, Council Bluffs and South Omaha, now being distributed by the passenger department of the Chicago and North-Western Ry. It is a very interesting publication, giving a mass of information as to the historical, civic and commercial growth of the cities named, all gotten up in excellent taste, handsomely illustrated and bound in an attractive cover.

The North-Western Line is to be complimented on the spirit evidenced in producing this publication, which it is to be hoped will be of much value to those cities to whose interest the little volume is devoted.

A copy of the book may be secured on receipt of 2-cent stamp sent to H. C. Cheyney, General Agent, 1401 Farnam St., Omaha.

For sale—Two second hand Norfolk furnaces will be sold cheap. Apply at The News office.

THE BEWILDERED GUEST.

The copy of the following poem by W. D. Howells has been in the possession of J. E. Simpson of this city for many years. He has not seen it published since and deems it worthy of reproduction. It was somewhat mutilated in the long keeping, and perhaps the lines and rhymes are not absolutely accurate, but the sentiment is there:

I was not asked if I should like to come,
I have not seen my host here since I came.
Or had a word of welcome in his name.
Some say that we shall never see him,
and some then know
That we shall see him elsewhere, and Why we were bid. How long I am to stay
I have not the least notion. None,
they say,
Was ever told when he should come
of so;
But every now and then there bursts forth on
The song and mirth, a lamentation,
A sound of shrieks and sobs, that make our joys
Dumb in our breasts; and then, some one is gone.
They say we'll meet him. None knows where or when,
We know we shall not meet him here
again.
W. D. Howells.
