HIS DREAM COMES TRUE.

P. O. Hirsch Has Realized His One Ambition.

NEW INVENTION FOR TAILORS.

After Laboring for Forty Years, a Veteran Norfolk Craftsman Completes an Instrument Which Measures the Human Shape.

After having devoted forty years of his lifetime and that incessantly, and after giving his whole time and thought to it during the past two years, P. O. Hirsch, a veteran tailor or Norfolk, has finally completed an invention by which it is hoped to revolutionize the present system of physical measurement by the members of his craft.

The instrument has been given to the manufacturer and two samples have just been received by the inventor. Packed neatly in a factory, the little long box which came to Mr. Hirsch through the express, meant very much to him. It meant that the box carried to him a realization of all his dreams, all his thoughts, all his ambitions and hopes through two score years of his existence, and those two score years coming as they do right in the prime of his usefulness.

How it Works.

The purpose of the device is not only to take measurements of the human form but also to take the exact shape of the man whose clothing would fit. By an arrangement of little compasses and tape lines and graduated rulers of flexible celluloid, Mr. Hirsch has created an article which will draw a picture of the form it has measured, after the man is gone. So delicate is the apparatus that the slightest curve in the back, the finest hollow under the armpit, the smallest rounding out on the chest or stomach, will all be recorded so accurately that the pattern may be drawn to cover the human frame in every particular within a fraction of an inch.

The machine is made of celluloid and may be curved in any manner, to fit the figure. The standard sets in the left arm pit and from here the measuring is done. The tapes are drawn to the small of the back, to the chest, etc., all simultaneously. The compasses register every curve and the lot of figures make a picture of the man.

Needed for Years for Tailors.

A patent has been applied for by Hirsch. There have been millions of tailors, says Mr. Hirsch, who have needed and wanted just this kind of an instrument. Ever since the craft was begun away back in the time that people began to wear any clothes at all, the tailor has wanted some machine by which he could make a picture and get the shape of the subject. To accomplish this end the venerable Norfolk craftsman has given up the best of his life and now his creative fancy and his whole thought have been crowned with a real, practical, finished product to give to his fellow workmen.

May Make a Fortune.

Mr. Hirsch may, and his friends hope he will, make a fortune from the scheme. The instrument will be wrapped in a neat box and the measuring device will be sold for not less than $25 each. They are said to be worth $100 to any tailor who is old at the business.

Worked for Forty Years.

Mr. Hirsch, the inventor, has labored for forty years and for the last two years he has given his whole attention. In his efforts he has been assisted materially by P. J. Fuesler. For six months he was engaged in trying to get a firm to manufacture the article. Finally, from a little card advertisement, he dropped upon a name which helped him out and now a factory in Brooklyn is turning out the product of his brain. The factory does not know what the machine they are making is for, but Hirsch does and that is enough.

ATCHISON GLOBE SIGHTS.

Don't take defeat too easy.

In some Joke Books, you will not find a single joke.

Whether a girl is pretty, or whether she thinks she is, she acts the same.

Ethics is something you must not violate if you are going to be caught at it.

When a man is about to get married, in spite of his best efforts to get away he is particularly mean about it.

We should think that running a boarding house would be a great deal like giving three church suppers a day.

Joe Alnsworth, the brakeman, says he notices a great many people carrying passes that ought to be investigated.

An Atchison woman is not only looking death in the face, and is not afraid, but she is laughing about it. Could you do it?

Here is an argument: A man who has dyspepsia says it is responsible for his irritable disposition. Others in the family suggest that his irritable disposition is what causes dyspepsia.

About six months after a man has married for a house, his wife begins to show figures proving that it is cheaper to board.

We have observed that when a number of women get together, no one declares that "her church doesn't owe a cent."

When a boy stops going around to the back door on his neighborhood visits, and goes to the front door, he also stops going so often, and doesn't have as good a time.

A Leavenworth woman is very indignant. She advertised for a husband and the newspapers mentioned the affair. She thinks newspapers ought to have some regard for the sacredness of one's "private affairs."

Two Atchison bums went to Leavenworth some time ago, and loafed at a certain saloon until the proprietor was sick of them. The proprietor tried again and again to get rid of the bums, but his efforts were in vain. Then he thought of a scheme. He went out and bought an enormous imitation diamond for a dime. He pretended to get drunk and go to sleep in the back room. Half an hour later the saloon keeper was minus his imitation diamond, and the two bums were hitting the railroad ties for Atchison.

A little Atchison girl is very fond of her kin; waits on them and is affectionate with them. One day, during one of her little love feasts, one of her aunts said: "Why do you love us so much? Of course you love us because you are a sweet pretty little girl, but we are not pretty and sweet, and are often disagreeable, so why are you so fond of us?" The little girl looked very much surprised at such a ridiculous question, and said: "Why, I love you because you are my relatives." The last reason older people have for loving each other is because they are relatives.

Former friends and acquaintances, now in their old age, who had nearly forgotten the man and the deed will retell the story of the old crime and identify Healy, despite his changed appearance. Healy is said to have shot and killed Ferdinand Pomeranz in the yard of the latter's home July 3, 1888. At the time Healy escaped and has since traveled about the world. In the meantime a murder was committed in Kansas City, the victim being a woman, the keeper of a little grocery, who was shot down by hold-up men, and Healy, under the name of Redmond, was charged with the crime. After the Kansas City murder he joined Roosevelt's Rough Riders, but deserted.

CHANGE FOR RURAL ROUTES

People Want Route No. Two Changed.

INSPECTOR VISITS NORFOLK.

Drove Over the Territory Covered by Route No. 2 and by Route No. 4, but Refuses to Give any Information Regarding Prospects.

Rural Route Inspector Fagerton is in Norfolk from Omaha and will drive over two of the rural routes leading from the city with a view to changing the directions of the present courses, according to petitions filed by the farming patrons.

Mr. Fagerton drove over route No. 2, west of the city, on Tuesday morning, in company with Carrier Rouse. Or rather Mr. Rouse accompanied Mr. Fagerton, for the rural route inspector hired a livery team and drove the carrier around the section.

Change at Ray Corner.

Patrons in the neighborhood of the Ray corner, six miles west, want a change by which the carrier will drive north and take in an extra mile or so of territory. A change is also asked in the neighborhood of the Ommerman farm.

In order to make this addition three boxes that are now covered, would be omitted from the list. Another change is asked south of the Ray corner but it is not likely that this will be granted.

On Wednesday morning Mr. Fagerton will drive over route No. 4 and will then return to Omaha. He refused to give any information regarding prospective changes, whatsoever.

ROB PLEASANTDALE BANK.

Thieves Blow Open Safe and Get Thirty-five Hundred Dollars.

Pleasantdale, Neb., Oct. 21.—The safe of the First State bank here was blown open with nitro-glycerine shortly before 4 a. m. and $3,500 stolen.

The burglars escaped in a buggy, followed by a crowd of citizens who were awakened by the explosion. Over a dozen shots were fired at them as they drove down the street, but whether any of the shots took effect is not known. Lincoln and all the surrounding towns were notified and the sheriff, Detective Malone and his bloodhounds and the police were in the search for the men before 6 o'clock. It is supposed the job was done by three men. Entrance was gained to the bank by unlocking the front door with a skeleton key, after which the vault door was picked and the men got access to the safe. Here they drilled a hole and used nitro-glycerine. The explosion smashed a hole in the side of the safe and jarred nearly every house in the village. Mr. Ackerman, who is an officer of the bank, with a number of neighbors who heard the explosion, rushed to the bank just as the men started down the street in a buggy. The command to halt was given and was answered by a shout to the horses. Ackerman and his men then fired at least a dozen times at the fleeing burglars. The buggy, which was so relentlessly pursued by the posse, did not contain the robbers, as was at first supposed, but was occupied by George Mordhenke, his wife and two daughters. The rear end of the buggy testifies to the good marksmanship of the posse. It is riddled and the wheels are marked in a dozen places.

Mordhenke and his family reached Pleasantdale from their home near here about 5 o'clock on route to Lincoln. They were driving slowly past the saloon when some one called out for them to halt. Mrs. Mordhenke said "drive" and the head of the house did. None of them was struck by the bullets.

A letter from Senator Hansbrough of North Dakota on the subject of irrigation was read and O. H. Plumely presented the report of the delegates from Ogden, showing the advantages which accrued to the waste places of Utah and other states from irrigation. The report urged the convention to work in every way possible for the expenditure of North Dakota's irrigation fund within the border of the state.

He holds that M. Fralsainet was a servant and not Parker's wife.
