

THE NEW RAILROAD YARDS

Conveniences of the New Northwestern System.

MUCH TIME AND LABOR SAVED.

Round House, Machine Shops and Yards Have Attractions to the Men Handling the Big Machines of the Northwestern Company.

[From Saturday's Daily.] Upon approaching the new round house and shops at the Northwestern yards in South Norfolk, one cannot but be impressed with the substantial and modern appearance of the buildings and an examination of the interior will soon convince anyone that they do not deceive their looks.

The old style of turntable was short and its center rested on a friction base. It required from four to six men to turn an engine on it in bad weather and was about all three or four men could do to manage it under favorable conditions, whereas the new table is ball bearing, turns very easily and is seventy feet long, allowing the largest engines to turn upon it easily.

The new round house is equipped with drop jacks so that when an engine is put into a stall the jack is lowered to the top of the smokestack making it impossible for smoke or gas to escape into the building, also insuring a perfect draft. The jacks are lowered and raised by means of levers and weights, and are so balanced that one man is able to operate them with ease. The old style required the combined efforts of two or more men and even then it was often quite impossible to raise them full height. The roof is also an improvement, as it is equipped with ventilators, which allow any smoke or gas, which might be in the building, to escape at once, it also has an offset of about four feet near the gable, thus serving the place of a skylight, and admitting plenty of light from the rear of the building as well as the front. This is a decided improvement as it will be light in the engine cabs, making it convenient for machinists to work on them.

The building will be heated with hot air, thus doing away with the steam and water that always filled the rooms, more or less, from leaky joints. It also does away with frozen pipes.

The old method of handling cinders was burdensome, as it required two men to shovel the cinders out of the pit on to the ground and from there into a car. The new pit is so constructed that cars will stand on either side of the pit below the track permitting the cinders as they are cleaned from the engines to fall on to an incline which carries them to cars below. When the car has been loaded it requires but a few minutes to haul it out and place an empty one in its place.

The oil and supply rooms are of the latest type, situated so the cars containing supplies can be switched to their doors and will be on a level with the platform.

The coal chute, water tank and sand house are built in close proximity to each other. To coal an engine all that is necessary is to stop the engine at the side of the chute and pull down the spout and the coal is soon deposited in the tender, then by moving down the track a few feet water and sand may be taken in like manner.

This equips the locomotive for another trip as far as coal and water and sand is concerned, and the whole operation should be accomplished in about eight or ten minutes. The old method requires the service of several men and from thirty to forty-five minutes.

Taking it all in and considering the size of the plant, nowhere in the country is there a more substantial and up-to-date engine terminal, than is being put in by the Northwestern right here at Norfolk.

CORNHUSKERS PRACTICE POORLY

Coach Booth Gives Them a Turn at Roasting—Perry Being Tried for Half.

Lincoln, Nov. 21.—The cornhuskers lined up against Bellevue college this afternoon and will play a good practice game. They have been preparing through the week for the Illinois game which comes off on Thanksgiving.

Ragged practice and lack of spirit were the main features of the exhibition on Nebraska field Wednesday night when the varsity team went out to get ready for Bellevue and Illinois. The scrubs are putting up a mighty good article of football and the first eleven is playing just like it did a few days before the game with Kansas. Booth uses all his powers of persuasion and command to make the men play with more spirit, but they go into the game in a faint-hearted way.

The linemen have a new system of charging. They go into the line back foremost and the scrubs do the rest. Booth "roasted" his strong men Wednesday and gave them to understand that the fellow who tried to buck the line with his head in the rear would not have a chance to play in the Illinois game. Hard charging the things that is needed in the Nebraska team and the coaches are still laboring to remedy this one defect.

Booth is using a "call back" system in practice, taking Wilson out of the line for half back and running a back in his position. Perry of Norfolk has been tried in the same kind of a play. Perry is trying to tackle this week and does effective work against the scrubs. Ringer is alternating with Cotton at guard and may be in the game against Illinois. Cotton is not in his best form, his illness before the Kansas game reducing his weight. Bell was not out at practice Thursday night and Benedict will not show up since his trip to Lawrence. He has recovered from his injury, however, and probably will be in the game Saturday.

With just one week in which to defeat Bellevue and prepare for Illinois, Nebraska feels confident of a victory over the eastern men. The Cornhuskers will depend upon fast playing, open runs and that other thing known as spirit. On her own grounds, with the rosters shouting for the scarlet and cream and on a well known field, Booth's men believe they can outplay the husky fellows who have weight to burn and considerable swiftness.

Reserved seats for the Illinois game are selling fast and the demand will increase as the date for the big game draws near. Manager Buckner is hoping for a pleasant day. He expects 6,000 spectators. The Western Passenger association has authorized a rate of one fare plus 50 cents for the round trip from all points in Nebraska from which the local one way rate is $3 or less. The tickets are on sale November 25 with a limit to November 27.

VALUE OF NATIONAL GUARDS

Manly Qualities of Young Men are Developed.

STATE AND NATION LIBERAL.

Make Good Appropriations for the Maintenance of Citizen Soldierry. Advantages of Some Features of the Militia System of the Country.

[From Saturday's Daily.] The value of an organized militia has been recognized in the United States from the earliest days of this nation and the constitution grants congress the power to provide for calling forth the militia, as well as guaranteeing the right of the people to keep and bear arms.

The constitution of the state of Nebraska provides that the governor shall be the commander-in-chief of the military and naval forces of the state, and may call out the same to execute the laws, suppress insurrection, and repel invasion, and authorizes the legislature to determine what persons shall constitute the militia of the state, and to provide for organizing and disciplining the same.

The laws of Nebraska declare that all able-bodied male citizens between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, not expressly exempted by law, shall be subject to military duty; and collectively shall be designated as the militia. The organized militia is designated as the Nebraska National Guard.

In time of peace the civil power is supreme and the military duty of all citizens and the citizen soldier is enjoined to remember that it is upon him when the civil power has failed, that the state relies for the vindication of its laws and institutions imperiled from whatever cause; and that in becoming a soldier he has lost none of the characteristics or duties of a citizen, but has assumed simply such further obligations as imperatively demand of him such conduct as shall inspire the confidence and respect of the people.

Active members of the National Guard are exempt from working on roads and highways and from the payment of any poll tax levied for that purpose and are exempt from sitting on any grand or petit jury. At the last session of the legislature an appropriation of twenty thousand, six hundred dollars per year was made for the support of the guard.

A new law affecting the national guard was adopted by congress in January 1903, relieving the states of the expense of equipment, transportation and encampments, which will enable the legislature with reduced appropriations to make better provisions for armories, officers' schools, target ranges and the military boards necessary for the administration of national guard interests.

The value of military drill in the development of manly qualities is well established. The United States military academy at West Point is a model for many other schools, while the state universities of most of the states include drill with their required studies, and some of the most successful private schools such as Shattuck and Kenyon are organized as military schools. The required regularity, order, neatness, courtesy and physical training all have their influence and benefit in after life in whatever occupation a man may engage.

To those who have not the advantage of the training of these schools the national guard comes as the school of the citizen soldier. In the army are taught precision, accuracy, promptness, deference to superiors, courtesy and good fellowship, as well as physical development that has no superior in any system, and many business and professional men give the training received in the drill hall credit for their good physiques and remember as pleasant and profitable the hours there spent with their comrades.

Just a word about the regular army. There was a time when the regular service was recruited entirely from the large cities. That day has gone by and now the army recruits from the villages throughout the country, getting altogether a different class of members from what were formerly secured, and with the requirements for admission, the army will now compare favorably with any organization as to the intelligence and general character of its members.

COMPANY L, SECOND REGIMENT.

A Creditable Organization for the Young Men to Join.

Company L, Second regiment, Nebraska National guard, stationed in this city, has been practically reorganized within the last six months and is an organization that is endeavoring to merit the support and encouragement of the citizens. Applicants for admission are required to furnish evidence of a good moral character and a certificate as to physical condition and are placed on probation for several weeks before their enrollments are finally accepted. The old armory was abandoned some time since as being inadequate for the needs of a first-class company and the company now occupies quarters well adapted for the purpose in the Olney building. The state provides the equipment of arms, uniforms, tents, camp ranges, mess outfits, etc., and allows the company $100 annually for rent. This sum is far from being sufficient however and it is hoped the amount will be increased by the next legislature. The members of Company L are doing their share to promote the social and athletic life of the city. Social balls, and stag parties are held at the armory from time to time for the enjoyment of the members and their friends. Part of the athletic equipment includes a first-class wrestling mat, and many of the informal matches would do credit to more pretentious public exhibitions.

The company made a splendid showing at the recent army maneuvers at Fort Riley, Kas., which they attended, and throughout the entire tour as well as enroute to and from the camp no breach of discipline occurred, which is an exceptional record. The boys received many compliments from the inspecting officers on their appearance and the condition and order maintained in their camp.

The membership of the company is at present forty-six and it is planned to recruit to the maximum strength allowed and begin active preparations for next year's tour of duty which will perhaps include a trip to the St. Louis exposition.

[From Saturday's Daily.] The city council met in regular session Thursday evening with the mayor and all the councilmen except Tyler present.

The street and alley committee reported that Mr. Shipley had thrown up the contract to dig the Park avenue ditch and that the work was only a little more than three-fourths done, with about $50 of the contract price unexpended. The street and alley committee was authorized to complete the ditch, provided that the cash outlay does not exceed the contract price, but if it is found that there is not sufficient money to complete the work the committee was given permission to sell enough of the dirt to provide money for completing the ditch.

A warrant was drawn in favor of the chairman of the street and alley committee for $251.05 to pay the laborers for the work already done on the ditch, $100 to be drawn from the appropriation for miscellaneous expenses and $251.05 from the appropriation for streets and alleys.
