The state that didn't give President Roosevelt a plurality of about 100,000 does not appear to be entitled to be ranked up with republican states this year.

Mrs. Cashie Chadwick is occupying quite successfully the newspaper space formerly devoted to Mrs. Maybrick and more recently by Nan Patterson. It is a rare occasion when some woman does not arise to the demands and furnish sensational matter for the news reporters.

The remnant of the solid south is anxious for a closer acquaintance with President Roosevelt, and the president intimates that a visit to that section of the country will be highly pleasing to him. Perhaps with a closer acquaintance with northern presidents the entire southland may go republican next year.

A Tennessee man has just died at the age of seventy with the boast that he had never kissed a woman, although he was a married man. He swore off when in a kissing game a young woman placed a pin in her mouth and dared him to take what was coming to him. He saw the gleam of the pin and vowed he never would kiss a woman and maintained to the last that he had kept the vow.

A very important young man down a disturbance by sending out a sensational story regarding the president and his children and a Thanksgiving turkey. The story was without foundation, but it furnished excitement enough to require a denial, which shows that unimportant and unscrupulous young men can create panic with very high and important personages. It is just that he should be denied the rights given to honorable reporters and correspondents.

The World-Herald thinks that the republicans are deserving of censure because two of the railroad corporations have attempted a test of the revenue law by withholding the taxes that have been assessed against them to get out without paying their just share of the taxation burden, but the republicans can no more prevent them from endeavoring to wriggle out of the assessment than they can keep garded with suspician from this time the World-Herald from attempting to on.
