

HONOR TO JOHN PAUL JONES

FIRST AMERICAN ADMIRAL IS GIVEN TRIBUTE.

TWO COUNTRIES CEMENT TIES

France and the United States join in the official transfer of the Admiral's body to his countrymen of a succeeding generation.

Paris, July 6.—Another link in the chain of friendship binding together the great republics of the new and old worlds was forged today when official France united with representatives of the United States in paying respect to the memory of the great American admiral, Paul Jones.

Hogs.—The favorable market and the cool, wet weather, caused liberal receipts of hogs, also, and while the demand continues good, the market ruled 2 1/2 to 5c lower, with the bulk selling, $5.25 to $5.30. Light hogs are still selling best, but the range in prices is very narrow.

Sheep and lambs are selling at the high point of the season. Groer, Mills & Co., Epworth League at Denver.

Portland, Ore., July 6.—The National Woman's Suffrage association convention ended last night. Many resolutions and reports were considered.

Los Angeles, July 6.—General Amasa Cobb, brigadier general of volunteers during the civil war, veteran of the Mexican war, ex-congressman and ex-justice of the supreme court of Nebraska, died here, aged seventy-two years.

18,000 ENDEAVORERS GATHER

International Convention Formally Opened at Baltimore.

Baltimore, July 6.—The twenty-second international Christian Endeavor convention was formally opened in Armory hall, with about 18,000 delegates present and nearly all of the 18,000 seats in the vast auditorium occupied.

Washington, July 1.—This morning Charles J. Bonaparte of Baltimore took the oath of office as Secretary of the Navy Paul Morton's successor and assumed the duties devolving upon the civilian head of the navy.

Portland, Ore., July 5.—Mrs. Gertrude Dodgson shot and killed her husband, Thomas Dodgson, and then killed herself. The tragedy took place at Twelfth and Northup street.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., July 5.—Through misunderstanding of orders, two interurban trolley cars collided head-on on a curve near Swisher, twelve miles south of this city.

in the cattle market Monday, together with the holiday and the desire on the part of the feeders to unload, caused large supplies everywhere today and a good share of the advance was lost.

Strictly choice cattle are scarce and we think will continue so through the year, but the other grades being more plentiful, causes a wider range in prices.

Stocks and feeders are selling at the recent decline and may not change much in the near future, but we look for lower prices later unless the corn market should rule considerably lower.

We look for liberal receipts at the western markets right along, as the corn situation and present prices for hogs will cause a free movement, but we don't look for anything like a famine, and don't believe in discounting the future, but we continue to advise operating regularly and shipping whenever hogs are ready.

Denver, July 6.—Delegations of members of the Epworth league from Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and South Dakota to attend the seventh international convention have arrived.

Judge S. W. Hayes has moved his justice of the peace office from the city building to the building of Herman Brummond on South Fifth street.

The weather has permitted the resumption of the cement walk building and it will be hurried along with all speed to get it out of the way of another bad spell as much as possible.

Mr. Ludwig Koenigstein has enrolled a new music student on his list, a boy having arrived at his home on North Seventh street this morning. Hosts of friends will extend congratulations.

Coyote hunters who are not favored by a bounty law in their own counties are now drawing on the state treasury for their pay, this being another new law that has gone into effect with the first of July.

A dumb mute walked into a Norfolk store yesterday and asked the price of an article. When it was written out for him he replied, on paper, "You are too stingy," which the clerks considered pretty plain language for a dumb mute.

The condition of H. L. Spaulding, who has been sick for months, shows no change over what has been for the past several weeks. He is no better and no worse, and his friends hope that by his unusual persistence and vitality he may be able to wear the disease out and recover his health. His sister, Mrs. S. G. Dean, has almost recovered from her late sickness and is able to be out.

A number of the men with the carnival company, who are running splashes on the street, were at Bonesteel last summer during the rush. One of the spindle men saw the partner of Kid English, the young sport killed at Bonesteel, down at Beaumont, Texas, this year. The wheel men are working their way north to the Wimpelge fair. "We get more money out of a Canadian fair in a week than we do here in a year," he said. "The darkeys of the south are easy money, too," he declared. "They like jewelry and right after cotton season we get all colors of coin from them."

Frank Lenser of this city, who was home from Stanton county to spend the Fourth, gives some indication of the prosperity of the farmers of north Nebraska. He is building for his cousin, Frank Lenser, of Cedar Creek precinct in Stanton county, a handsome, up-to-date farm home that will cost at least $3,000. It will be a fine residence, and one of the best in the neighborhood, but it is an indication of what other farmers have done and are about to do in north Nebraska.

The handsome and convenient farm home, with its equipment of large barns, spacious granaries and corn cribs, and other conveniences is the natural outgrowth of the prosperity they have known in the past several years. Conditions are rapidly approaching that of the older farmers of the east with many advantages that they never will possess.

RECEIVER IS IN CHARGE

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF TOPEKA IN HANDS OF BRADLEY.

TOO LARGE LOANS TO DEVLIN

Millionaire Coal Operator Turns Over Real Estate and Life Insurance. Bank Will Probably Pay Out—Mrs. Devlin Assigns Dower Interest.

Topeka, Kan., July 5.—J. T. Bradley of Sedan, receiver of the First National bank, arrived in the city and took charge of the bank. The officials of the bank turned everything over to Receiver Bradley, and he is making an effort to get the bank's affairs in shape.

The only thing in the shape of information about the bank comes from the Devlin interests. Clifford Histed, attorney for C. J. Devlin, says the estate is worth more than the indebtedness, and that the bank can pay out. C. S. Glead, head of the company which has taken over the Devlin interests, says that if there is no trouble in holding the property turned over to the bank by Devlin, a full settlement will be made.

A statement was published to the effect that Mr. Devlin owed other banks in Topeka nearly $500,000. This proves to be greatly over-estimated. Mr. Devlin's obligations to all the other banks of this city than the First National do not aggregate as much as $100,000.

The men engaged in clearing up the affairs of the First National bank praise the participation of Mrs. C. J. Devlin in her husband's affairs. The insurance policies which she assigned for the benefit of the creditors were entirely hers and might have been held for herself clear of all connection with the bank. She has assigned all her insurance except that which went to the children. The same is true of her dower interest in $700,000 worth of real estate.

It is not known just how much money will be needed to reorganize the Devlin interests. It is now thought that something like $250,000 will be sufficient. When the corporation was first planned it was the intention to save the First National bank of Topeka. This would have taken much more money than is necessary now. Circumstances made it impossible to do this and now it is no longer necessary to put up money for saving the bank. It is thought that the Devlin property and the resources of the bank itself will be sufficient to pay all obligations of the bank.

In brief, this is the condition of the bank: The obligations of the bank to depositors amount to about $1,300,000. Against these deposits there is the property transferred and the other Topeka real estate securities turned over to the bank by Mr. Devlin, amounting in all to $700,000. In addition, there are the insurance policies turned in by Mr. Devlin, the actual cash value of which is stated at $200,000. The assets of the bank, exclusive of the Devlin property turned in, amount to $1,500,000. Of this there is Devlin collateral, with a par value of $600,000. The other notes held by the bank amount to $300,000. At the time the bank was closed there was approximately $150,000 in cash on hand.

KANSAS WHEAT THE BEST.

It Leads the World, Says a European Flour Merchant.

"There is no wheat anywhere in the world so good as Kansas wheat," said John M. Turner, flour merchant of Hamburg and London, who, with his business partner, S. Gruner, recently journeyed to Kansas City to attend the convention of the National Millers' federation, says the Kansas City Star. "Everywhere in Europe," Mr. Turner continued, "American wheat stands high in the estimation of the people, but Kansas leads the world. There's nothing like it, no other wheat with so much gluten, so much muscle and nerve building stuff in it. It has become so popular on the continent as well as in Great Britain that flour dealers have to carry it regardless of the price or profit.

"All the wheat in Russia is grown or controlled by the Jews. Fearing a ukase from the czar against exporting the crop last year, they rushed it all out of the country. The result was Denmark, Holland, Great Britain, Belgium and Germany were blocked with Russian wheat. It's poor stuff. They don't clean it. You can find almost everything in it—rye, corn, oats, tacks, pieces of wood, nails and other property that doesn't belong there. European buyers have complained bitterly against this Russian wheat. They want American grain, American flour, and a wonderful market is being built up for it. American flour in Berlin today is worth in American money about $6.50 to $7 for a hundred kilos, which is 220 pounds. In other words, we pay for American flour nearly the same price you pay in Kansas City, plus the freight. The freight rates, steamer rates, change about every two hours. So keen is the competition between steamer lines and railroads that the rates are quoted for immediate acceptance and die with the day."

GALILEO'S TOWER A CAFE.

How a Famous Belle is Being Desecrated by Italian Commercialism.

For centuries a conspicuous object on the beautiful hill of Arcet, above Florence, in Italy, the famous "Star tower" of Galileo, where the great astronomer made many of his most important discoveries, is now practically destroyed, says a Florence correspondent of the Chicago Tribune. Commercial enterprise is responsible. For some months the picturesque structure has been swathed in scaffolding while workmen have been engaged in raising the quaint castellated tower by a third of its former height, piercing its walls with two new tiers of windows and adding a loggia. When the work is completed the tower will be used for a cafe and restaurant.

"To the Anglo-Saxon race," says one writer, who has protested too late against the destruction of the historic monument, "Galileo's tower possessed a special interest, in that it was the scene of the classic meeting between John Milton and the great Italian astronomer. Indeed in the whole history of science and literature there is no incident more picturesque or affecting than this introduction of the Puritan poet, young and vigorous, with his brain teeming with conceptions for his mighty epic, to the Florentine sage, blind, old and persecuted for affirming the great truths of the solar system."

Another place of pilgrimage in Italy which on sentimental grounds makes a far stronger appeal than the "Star tower" to popular imagination, will soon vanish entirely if something is not speedily done to preserve what remains of it. This is the house in Verona from the balcony of which Juliet cried: "Oh, Romeo! Wherefore art thou Romeo?" The mansion is crumbling to ruins and on the point of collapse.

It is probable that only the facade of the building formed part of the original structure. The arms of the house of Capulet, however, still brava the weather over the entrance gate in the interior court, and an inscription placed there reads, "This is the house of the Capulets, from which sprang Juliet, for whom so many poets have sung and tender hearts have wept."

Though shoals of pilgrims have visited the shrine consecrated to two immortal lovers, the shrine itself has been put to strange uses. It has served at various times as a cabman's lodging house, a restaurant, a warehouse for carts and a farrier's shop.

THE APPOINTING POWER.

A Story of President Grant and an Obsolete Subordinate.

General Grant's generosity to his foes, his many private and official kindnesses to the widows and orphans of Confederate soldiers, is an old tale, but it bears repetition in the form of an incident which Helen D. Longstreet gives in "Lee and Longstreet at High Tide."

The widow of a Confederate officer applied to the postoffice department to be appointed postmistress in a small southern town. As she heard nothing of her application, she went to Washington to press it. She was unable to move the authorities at the postoffice department and was about to go home in despair when a friend suggested that it might be worth while for her to see the president.

With much effort she summoned courage and appeared at the White House. The president received her in a most friendly manner and after hearing her story took her application and wrote a strong but brief indorsement on the back of it. She hurried in triumph to the postoffice department.

The official to whom she presented the application frowned and pondered over it for some time and then wrote under the president's indorsement, "This being a fourth class office, the president does not have the appointing power."

The application was handed back to her, and she went away in deep distress and was again preparing to return home when another friend told her by all means to take the paper back to the president, so that he might see how his indorsement had been received. When the president read it he wrote under the last indorsement, "While the president does not have the appointing power in this office, he has the appointment of the postmaster general," and, summoning his secretary, President Grant directed him to accompany the lady to the department and in person deliver her application to the postmaster general.

She received the commission before she left the office.

War History.

An old ducky was watching the G. A. R. parade one Memorial day, and was vociferously cheering the band. I suppose you were through the civil war, uncle?" said a bystander. "Ever' step of it, suh!" "At the surrender too?" "Ever' step of it, suh!" "What did General Lee say to General Grant?" "Never said nuttin', suh; des chopped off his haid an' went on!"
