

HOME FROM CONVENTION

GEO. D. BUTTERFIELD RETURNS FROM WASHINGTON.

RECEIVED BY THE PRESIDENT

President Roosevelt had arranged to stand in line for an hour and a half, but the crowd prolonged it for three and a half.

George D. Butterfield returned last night from Washington, where he attended the national bankers' convention. There were 4,000 bankers present from all parts of the United States.

On one afternoon President and Mrs. Roosevelt received the visitors. They planned to receive bankers at the white house from 2 till 3:30 o'clock but there were so many bankers and their wives who had not shaken hands with Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt by 3:30 that the nation's chief continued to stand in line until 5:30.

Secretary Shaw also received the visitors at his home. Washington belonged to the visitors. Everything in the way of theater tickets, railroad excursion tickets and the like was free.

Mr. and Mrs. Butterfield joined the excursionists at Chicago, where two handsome trains of ten Pullmans and two diners each, all new cars, drew the bankers east. They went to old Point Comfort and later to Washington by boat, making a very beautiful trip.

Mrs. Butterfield stopped off at Davenport enroute home and will not return until next week.

Advance fears for a rainstorm came pretty nearly being realized late yesterday afternoon in Norfolk when the clouds began to gather and the rain began to fall. Suddenly, however, the storm area seemed to swing to the south, a high pressure area followed, shoving the barometer up beyond the thirty-inch mark, and this morning dawned with another beautiful, cloudless sky.

The funeral services over the remains of Miss Ella Zuelow were held this afternoon. Services at the family home, Phillip avenue and Sixth street, were held at 1:30 o'clock and services at the St. Paul's Lutheran church were held at 2 o'clock. Interment was in the church cemetery. The services were largely attended by friends of the family and there were many floral tributes. Rev. Mr. Witte, pastor of the church, had charge of the services.

Many farmers living at quite a great distance from Norfolk come to this city to do their trading because they say they find a better market in the house to house sales here than they do in many other places. One woman from south of Waverlyville came to Norfolk last week and gave as her reason the fact that she is always able to dispose of all of the farm produce—chickens, melons, eggs, butter and the like—at the various residences about town, and at good prices.

The funeral of Mrs. Charles Millis, who succumbed yesterday morning at her home on South Eighth, was held at 4 o'clock this afternoon from Trinity Episcopal church and interment was in the Prospect Hill cemetery. A very large number of persons were present for the funeral services, including scores of friends of the deceased neighbor and scores, also, of the bereaved husband. There were a great many very beautiful floral tributes sent by friends of the family.

Sterling Morton, will be there. The unveiling of the monument will mark an epoch in the history of the west, as Mr. Morton was one of the strongest characters who ever came "out of the west." Dr. Bear will be unable to attend on account of his trip south to Mexico.

C. E. Burnham and Dr. Alexander Bear left Norfolk over the Union Pacific railroad at 11 o'clock this morning for a trip through Mexico with a party of capitalists who are going south to investigate the conditions in that country with a view to investing in a railroad project. They will join a large party of excursionists at Kansas City tomorrow morning, whence they will start at once for Mexico City. They will remain in Mexico for five days. Among others who will go from Nebraska are E. C. Harris of Chadron, Mr. McGrew and Mr. Brown of Omaha. The party will arrive at Mexico City next Tuesday and will be gone ten days.

Albert Uecker, who was shot in the eye with a toy cannon on the Fourth of July, has so far recovered from his injuries that he is again able to see with the injured optic. It was in shooting off a little cannon that the boy was hurt. The barrel of the gun was chucked full to the brim with powder, and the powder rammed down as hard as it could be rammed. Then the nose of the cannon was pointed toward the street and the members of the artillery retired to the porch. The fuse burned to the powder, there was a boom, the cannon swung around until it faced the bunch of boys and the lead struck the Uecker lad in the eye. It was thought for a time that he would lose the sight of that eye.

Stein's bloodhounds were taken to Concord, Neb., this morning by Mr. Livingston for the purpose of running down a horse thief who stole a team, buggy and harness from a stable in that town.

A Tribute.

The warmest heart is not always found beneath the breast of the man of means and culture. An incident in Norfolk this morning demonstrated that. It demonstrated the fact, too, that when the Grim Destroyer brings a summons to a home in this world, the tenderest and sincerest sentiments of which men are capable go forth to those who are left to grieve.

It was only a wreath of flowers. There are always wreaths of flowers when funeral bells ring, but the perfume of the roses is not always intermingled with the sentiment that was conveyed by this one.

What is the gift without the giver? What, too, is the tribute without the heart of the sender sent with it? And when that heart beats in the bosom of a man of the world; when that sentiment springs from the depths of the soul of a man who has been hardened by all that is worldly and earthy and who has been denied, by chance perhaps, the joy of the finer things—the love of a family and the pleasure of a home, the prestige of an education or even the guiding hand of a fond mother; when that wreath of flowers comes as a tribute of sympathy from one who knows the bad of the world and who has seen little of the good, it carries with it a tenderness that is doubly deep.

It was only a wreath of roses; but it was a beautiful, liberal wreath overshadowing the tributes of friends of greater means; and it said, by its perfume, "I want to cheer you in your hour of sorrow; I can't do much; here's a little token of sympathy that is sincere; I hope it may give you a little brightness in a dark day."

TONIGHT IS HALLOWE'EN

WHAT WILL BE DONE BY THE CROWDS OF CELEBRATORS.

POLICE FORCE WILL BE LARGE

The Halloween Customs of the Olden Times Vary Very Much From Those of the Present Day—Formerly Harmless, Now Injurious.

(From Tuesday's Daily.)

Tonight will be Halloween. There's another way of saying it. Tonight large numbers of young men and youths, and perhaps here and there a girl or so, will get together in crowds after dark and will start out on a march about town, doing whatever of damage they can do without getting in the hands of the police. They will remove gates from fences and hang the gates high up on the telephone poles; they will push over small buildings with utter disregard of the inconvenience and even expense of replacing the structures; they will carry bells from schoolhouse towers to distant spots; they will overturn loose board sidewalks and strew the street with the fragments. When chance allows they will haul buggies out of barns and run them for a distance, leaving them, perhaps, up against a neighbor's door.

The night may be a comparatively dark one but not a silent one. Out in the night air will ring the command, "Lift! Lift! Lift!" And then there will be a roar as of boards tearing apart and then a thud as some unfortunate sidewalk is thrown into the street.

Conditions Have Changed.

But conditions have changed somewhat since the old time Halloween celebrations. Norfolk has a bulge on the Halloween man in one way at least—the city now is equipped with miles and miles of cement sidewalks where board walks used to be, and it is both impossible and inadvisable for the celebrators to disturb the permanent walks.

Police Force Strengthened.

There will be policemen stationed all over town to keep an eye out for the Halloween disturbers. Mayor Friday having reinforced the regular corps by a squad of six extras. They have instructions to make arrests.

Halloween is the evening before All Saints' day and it was formerly celebrated in England by fireside stories and by ducking in tubs of water for apples; in Scotland it was considered a night of charm and the superstitious believed that they could on that night learn who was to be the future partner of each. From that custom the occasion has degenerated into the present American habit of soaping windows and doing damage.

The firm has rented the Wetzel building on east Main street and will be here for three months. The school opened today and is now ready to receive students. The school has seventy-five students at the last town visited. There will be other schools established by the same firm at York, Columbus, and Grand Island.
