UESTION THAT HAS BEEN DIS-

TURBING MADISON.

Agreement Between the Alien Rifles Armory Company and Company F. Nebraska National Guards Over the Armory Building.

Madison, Neb., June 16.-Special to The News: At the business meeting of Company F, First regiment of Nebraska National Guard, Ivan McKay was unanimously elected first lieutenant in place of Lieutenant Ed Esh, whose commission has lately expired. Lieut. McKay is a son of Landlord McKay of the Madison house. Frank Dempster and Fred Frazer were elected sergeants and Ed. Spratt and Jake Cleveland corporals.

The status of the army property, which has been under consideration some time, was also adjusted. The armory was built in the early '90s and most of the labor in its erection was performed by members of the company, assisted by contributions from citizens. Both those who worked and those who contributed, did so with the understanding that the building should be forever a home for company F and should be used for that purpose only. The total of the contributions, however, was not sufficient to cover cost of material and the purchase price of the lots. The late James Stuart permitted the armory to be erected on his ground, promising to donate it later, but gave no deed, so that after his death the title remained in the Stuart estate and had to be pur chased. Notes for the cost of the ma-6.97 terial had also been given, secured by the property.

So it was that when company F was reorganized some time after its return from the Philippines a relatively large indebtedness hung over the armory. The notes and interest being then overdue, the creditors were clamoring for their money. But there was no money, as the company had been mustered out of the national guard into the volunteers and so construc-Norfolk National bank ..... 96.70 tively had not existed as a militia company during the years 1898 and 1899, and of course received no rent money Norfolk National bank ..... 87.48 from the state for that time. To men tion that they brought no company fund home with them from the ser Norfolk National bank ..... 98.30 vice is entirely needless. So among the first problems that confronted them was to provide a way to secure Norfolk National bank ..... 13.00 the creditors and avoid litigation.

company organized a quasi private 3.00 drawn up and filed and shares issued and from then on company F paid this said Allen Rifles Armory company $100 a year rent, which the latter concern applied in whole or part The following bills were audited and in paying off the indebtedness. This satisfied the creditors but was not overly satisfactory to company F, but on the contrary was a continual source of friction, for on examining the articles of incorporation of the Allen Rifles Armory company it was found to contain a proviso that members were prohibited from seiling their shares to non-members but were permitted to sell them to each other. This carried to its logical conclusion means that one man in the Allen Rifles Armory company might buy up all the stock, become owner in fee simple and the original purpose of those who labored and contributed to erect the armory would be defeated.

Furthermore company F not only paid to this same armory company missioner district No. 1..... 106.50 $100 per annum rent and made large internal improvements on the building but when the armory rent allowed by the state was raised from $100 to $250 per year, the Armory company insist-5.00 ed that company F turn over to them this entire sum for the annual rent. By way of explanation it were well here to mention that several years after the reorganization of company F. some of its officers as well as some privates were also members of the Allen Rifles Armory company, and as no man can serve two masters or two interests, the result was inaction and matters remained in status quo. Of late, however, these have one by one dropped out, the matter was discussed, a conference held between Capt. Frazer of company F and the officers of the Armory company, at which a treaty was made. According to this the Allen Rifles Armory company agrees to pay its own members out of its treasury all they individually paid in as far as it goes. J. M. White, Seventy Years of Age, People-Creek Was Dragged.

Neligh, Neb., June 18.-Special to The News: J. M. White, who has act long postponed or neglected were been a resident of Antelope county for over twenty-six years, wandered away from the home of his son, A. W. White, who lives nine miles southwest fives of Canada, all of Stanton county of Neligh, on Antelope creek, between the hours of 9 and 10 o'clock Saturday morning and was not found until yeserday morning about 11 o'clock by Mayor J. C. Jenkins and H. B. Hauser of this city.

Mr. White is in his seventieth year and has been the constant attendant of his sick wife, who has been confined to her bed for a long time, and her death has been expected any day. The old people are making their home with the son, and since the illness of and as believed at the time, to keep the wife it appears that no one but the property from being foreclosed the husband could give the proper care upon, a number of ex-members of the and attention that she wished. It is believed that this constant care and concern under the title of the Allen worry has preyed on the old gentle-Rifles Armory company, procured a man's mind that at times he becomes quit claim deed to the property from demented. On Saturday morning he was seen walking west of the house in the pasture—the last seen of him until found His son and family thinking he could not be far began a search around the farm, but not being able to locate him informed the neighbors and the search was continued until nearly midnight Saturday-even dragging several deep holes with a hay rake on the creek near by.

Sheriff Miller was notified by this time to secure the Lincoln blood hounds, but this was thought to be of no avail, as the ground had been tracked by scores of people where Mr. White had been last seen. Sunday morning at 7 o'clock the tolling of the fire bell brought Neligh people out of their morning slumbers, and a searching party of twenty-five or more men and boys headed by Mayor Jenkins left for the farm of A. W. White. The search was continued in all directions, some being five and six miles north and northwest. At nearly 11 o'clock Messrs. Jenkins and Hauser drove one and one-fourth miles east of the A. M White farm to the old homestead of J. M. White, and there the old gentleman was found lying alongside the grove. He apparently was unconcerned as to his surroundings, and the first words uttered by him when brought to the buggy were. "Is my wife dead yet?" In the house Mr. White had a box where he kept quite a sum of money, and before his departure took between $40 and $50 with him. This, however, was found on him when he returned. There was rejoicing in the White home upon the return of father and grandfather, as was also among the many day who composed the searching party.
