

8 DEGREES FROM A FROST

MERCURY SANK LOW IN ITS TUBE HERE LAST NIGHT.

THREE-FOURTHS INCH OF RAIN

A Frenzied Storm Dropped Down on Norfolk Late Saturday Afternoon, and Autumn Weather Followed Yesterday and Today—Rain Was Local.

Autumn came galloping in at the heels of summer and almost got under the wire late Saturday afternoon, when a fierce rainstorm swooped down on this city and brought in its path a cold wave that came within eight degrees of the frost line. From the sweltering heat of the previous two weeks, people were suddenly thrown into shivers and furnace fires and overcoats would not have been at all uncomfortable yesterday. The lowest point reached by the thermometer was 40°, early this morning.

And it was no slouch of a rain. More than three-quarters of an inch of water dropped in the storm, and it didn't last long, either.

Ugly looking clouds banked up against the northwest at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon and before people had time to turn around the rain was here, swishing up and down the streets like a frenzied woman who had lost her child.

The barometer has shot skyward, indicating the cold wave that is now here.

A peculiar feature of the day was the fact that it was warmer out of doors in the sun than it was in the house.

There was no rain south of Stanton.

Ninety teachers are needed in the county. Mr. Cronin was highly impressed with Norfolk. "This is about the finest business city of its size I have seen," he said this morning, "and any city in the country could be proud of the Norfolk postoffice."

Work on the two new steel bridges over the Northfork river a mile and a half north of Norfolk on First street, is progressing nicely. The steel is all up on the north bridge and work was begun yesterday on the south bridge. A foreman was sick for several days, which delayed work somewhat, but now the force of nine men are busily engaged in resuming work on the south of the two bridges.

Arthur T. Ransom of Greencastle, Ind., died at the home of his brother, J. W. Ransom in this city last night. The deceased arrived in Norfolk a week ago, accompanied by his wife and a daughter eight years of age. He was forty-three years of age and is survived by a widow and two daughters. The remains will be shipped back to Indiana for burial. He took cold in Norfolk and pneumonia caused his death.

Oscar Richey, street commissioner, was acquitted in the sidewalk case. The jury found a verdict in his favor at a late hour in the day. This was the case in which the city street commissioner tore up a sidewalk on the property of Brac Hight, North Tenth street, under instructions of Mayor Friday, who declared the walk was in a dangerous condition. Mr. Hight brought complaint for the wilful destruction of property because he had received no notice that the sidewalk had ever been condemned. County Attorney Koenigstein filed the complaint and prosecuted it, while City Attorney Weatherby defended the street commissioner. The jurors were E. B. Kauffmann, August Brummond and Dr. C. F. W. Marquardt. No record of condemnation proceedings against the walk could be found by the city clerk in his record, but the mayor insists that the walk was condemned by the council at one time.

A band was organized in Norfolk last night. There are twenty-three players in the organization to start with, and there are prospects of forty before the season is finished. The enthusiasts met at the city hall last night and decided to organize and to give a band concert within the next two weeks for the purpose of demonstrating to the people of Norfolk that the local talent can make good music. On the strength of this concert the band will then ask subscriptions from the business interests of the city, so that a leader may be employed. The twenty-three original members are all good readers of music so that it will be a short time until they can produce a first class concert. In Will Ahlmann's safe there is music to the value of $200 which has never yet been opened, and some of these new pieces will be played in Norfolk. The band men hope that the Norfolk business interests will subscribe to the band fund so that the leader can be employed.

SEND TO NORFOLK FOR YEAST.

Mrs. F. G. Walters Writes From Panama for Few Cakes.

Yeast is a very rare article in Panama. The Mrs. Craft company received an order today from Mrs. F. G. Walters, who is now living in Panama, for a number of packages of yeast. Yeast is so very scarce that it is almost impossible to get the article and most all the bread has to be baked without it.

CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION.

McCarthy's Defeat.

Lincoln Star: The bright light which is suffusing that part of Nebraska of which Norfolk is the hub is nothing more nor less than the smile of the face of W. N. Huse, of The Norfolk News. The News probably could claim and deserve more credit for the defeat of Congressman McCarthy at the convention in Fremont than any other factor in the fight which resulted in victory for Judge Boyd.

The bitter opposition of Huse was the result of an alleged wrong on the part of McCarthy, that wrong being one of the most monumental sins—ingratitude. It happened that in another campaign, when McCarthy was running for congress and Huse was supporting him, The Norfolk News and another newspaper in the district printed, at McCarthy's request and in his behalf, an article which was given a libelous construction by the courts.

Huse and the other editor were "stuck" for damages and, it is alleged, McCarthy, the real beneficiary of the costly publication, failed to bear a portion of the penalty paid by the publishers for printing that which might better have been left out of their columns.

Leaving out of consideration the merits of Huse's defense and the question of whether or not he was justified in publishing the article which caused the trouble, the fact remains that trouble came and, according to Huse, McCarthy failed to step up and take his dose of the medicine.

Indignation on the part of Huse followed this evidence of ingratitude. He believed that a man who had acted in that way should not be sent back to congress, and he told the people of his county all about it in pretty strong terms, bringing in a few other issues which had more or less effect.

Newspapers are so often the victims of ingratitude that it will please many of the publishers of Nebraska to know that one thoughtless man has learned a lesson he will not soon forget. The average politician thinks the newspaper was created for his special benefit, to be used as he would direct and whenever he gives command. The man who would not think of asking the publisher to print a free notice about his hardware store expects a column of compliments when he decides to run for the legislature and is offended when the space is not given. And when a newspaper, particularly the so-called country newspaper, has wasted its space, its time, money and energy in promoting the cause of a home candidate, how often is it that the fellow, after his election, even thinks of going to his editor and thanking him for the service he has rendered?

The ingratitude of which Mr. Huse complains is a notable case in itself. But it does not stand alone. Probably every editor in Nebraska knows how ungrateful most office-seekers are, how forgetful they are, how "nervy" in expecting an editor to give, in unlimited quantities, that which to the editor is the equivalent of cash.

Newspapers have as one of their prime purposes the support of particular principles, such support to be given without price. But the average politician appears to believe that the newspaper was created for the purpose of boosting him into office, the editor to be passed without sign of recognition after election day.

Huse's Victory.

Hastings Tribune: By defeating J. J. McCarthy for a renomination to represent the Third district of Nebraska in the lower house of the United States congress, W. N. Huse, who is editor of The Norfolk News, won a splendid victory.

McCarthy made the mistake that so many men make—that of underestimating the other man's strength. When Honorable J. J. McCarthy ran for congress two years ago Editor Huse published an article in his paper which denounced in the most emphatic terms McCarthy's opponent. The article was furnished by the chairman of the republican county central committee who informed Mr. Huse that McCarthy requested the publication of the story and that he would vouch for its truthfulness. At first Huse refused to give the article publication, and it was not until the strongest kind of pressure was brought to bear that he consented. The article was published, McCarthy was elected—and Editor Huse had a $6,000 damage suit on his hands.

What did McCarthy do?

Nothing. When he was notified of the suit that had been started against Huse he put on a bold front and wanted to know what in h—l he had to do with it—or words to that effect. And that was all he did have to do with it. He left Huse to face that damage suit alone.

Huse faced the damage suit and fixed it up. Then he turned his attention to McCarthy and his campaign.

When Huse announced in his paper his intentions of defeating McCarthy, and gave his reasons for doing so there were some politicians who smiled, and said that Huse was only wasting good advertising space in his valuable journal. They figured that by virtue of his office McCarthy would have the party organization back of him, including every postmaster throughout the Third district.

It did look a little dubious for Huse; but not for one minute did he lose courage. Every day he talked to the people through the columns of his paper, and all that he said was the plain truth, without frills or flourishes. The people knew him, they listened to him, and they believed him. That was enough. McCarthy's boom was doomed.

At no stage of the game did McCarthy dream of failure. He laughed at the idea, hence the defeat carries with it a death-blow that will be hard to bear.

A Good Selection.

Nebraska Politician: In the nomination of Judge J. F. Boyd of Neligh as the republican candidate for congress in the Third district, the party has made a selection which will assist in increasing the majority this fall. The district convention held at Fremont Thursday turned down by a most decisive vote Congressman J. J. McCarthy's request for a renomination and designated the Neligh man as the standard bearer in the battle this fall. Judge Boyd is one of the most popular men in the Third district. His popularity is not confined to any particular section of the district, but is general. As a member of the district judiciary Judge Boyd has made a record which his successor on the bench will have to work hard to equal. The nomination of Judge Boyd was brought about through a feeling of general dissatisfaction over the district with the way in which Congressman McCarthy has looked after the interests of the district. Mr. McCarthy has not been as successful in securing appropriations for the district as was desired. His desertion of W. N. Huse of The Norfolk News when the latter was being sued for a libelous publication made in support of McCarthy, had much to do with turning sentiment against the congressman and the leading newspapers of the district were quick to take up the cause of Huse and demand McCarthy's retirement. In nominating Boyd to succeed McCarthy the republicans of the district have selected a man who will work tirelessly for their interests and who is bound to be recognized down at Washington. He is one of those men whom the district can afford to keep in congress for many years.

Congratulations.

Middletown, N. Y., Aug. 20.—W. N. Huse, Norfolk, Neb.—Dear Sir: Because of gross ingratitude shown you by Congressman McCarthy, I have been greatly interested in the matter whether McCarthy would again be nominated. To me it has been a wonder why you have been so lenient with him in showing him up as he deserved, since "the mills of the gods grind slow but grind exceedingly fine," which emphasizes what you say in the editorial headed "The News Has Been Fair." Concerning an ingrate "nothing more detestable does the earth produce than an ungrateful man." If you have half a chance of winning in a legal action against McCarthy growing out of the libel suit brought against you and for which he, as I understand it, was responsible, or should have been a party in defense of said libel, I wish you would begin action against him. You owe it, it seems to me, to your friends who have stood by you, to endeavor to recover what expense you were put to in defending McCarthy.

I beg to reiterate, the best editorial and newspaper for a country issue I have ever seen is The Daily News. Success to you.

Yours most sincerely,

S. W. Corwin.

McCarthy Was Disappointed.

Fremont correspondence to Omaha World-Herald: McCarthy was greatly disappointed, as he went into the convention with what he supposed was a sufficient number of votes to have made his nomination only a matter of form.

Boyd and his workers were very active. Before the convention they had determined to beat McCarthy, and made a canvass of the district. Because some of the delegates on the Brown ticket at North Bend were favorable to McCarthy the town convention went against the attorney general.

Editor Huse of Norfolk had claimed McCarthy broke faith with him, bitterly fought him, and the editor wielded influence in his part of the district against McCarthy.

There was no fight on the convention floor—the Boyd trick was turned too quickly.

The candidates, W. W. Young of Stanton, in addition to McCarthy and Boyd, were called before the convention. Boyd said he had been very active. McCarthy admitted his disappointment, and joined with Young in saying he would support the ticket.

They Loved McCarthy.

Pierce Call: We desire to inform The Norfolk Daily News that the endorsement of Judge Boyd for congress by the republican convention of Pierce county Monday was not a slap at our present honored congressman, J. J. McCarthy, but rather because Judge Boyd in his many visits to Pierce county in years past as district judge has become very popular. He has a close and intimate acquaintance with nearly every voter in the county and has the highest esteem of all. We have never heard a republican in this county speak disrespectfully of Congressman McCarthy or complain of his not doing his duty in Washington. In fact many have heartily commended him for doing his duty the past four years, but that was lost sight of in their enthusiasm for their old friend and neighbor, Judge Boyd. The personal scrap of The Norfolk News editor had no influence whatever upon the result in Pierce county.

Suited Them.

Burt County Herald: No one felt more jubilant over McCarthy's defeat than we did. When the news was phoned to us from Fremont a few minutes after Judge Boyd was nominated instead of McCarthy, we grabbed an armful of flags and unfurled them to the breeze proclaiming that McCarthy was defeated. He got just what was coming to him, just what he invited. The time is past when a congressman can take his orders from a few political bosses in each county and expect to serve his constituency satisfactorily. The political boss as a rule is a man of bad repute at home and it will sooner or later kill the official who hearkens to his advice. The political bosses will soon be out of a job.

There Was Trouble.

Omaha Daily News: Congressman McCarthy was defeated in his fight for the congressional nomination yesterday from the Third district and Judge Boyd of Neligh was pushed through on the first ballot, 129 to 123.

McCarthy had expected to carry the convention without any trouble, but there was no fight on the floor.

The Boyd men had been very active and made a canvass of the district before the opening.

Prominent among the fighters against McCarthy was Editor Huse of Norfolk, who claims that McCarthy broke faith with him.

The third candidate was W. W. Young of Stanton.

Machine Men Sneered.

Battle Creek Enterprise (before convention): While many of the machine republicans of the Third district may have sneered at the efforts made by W. N. Huse of The Norfolk News to defeat Congressman McCarthy for renomination, it is a self evident fact that Mr. Huse has succeeded in doing what he started out to do. Dodge county, supposed at one time to be solid for McCarthy, refused to endorse his candidacy and it now looks like Judge Boyd will receive the nomination on the first ballot. So far as republican newspapers are concerned, The News has made the fight single-handed and in the results the publisher must find great satisfaction.

Boyd All Right.

Tekamah Journal: In the nomination of Judge Boyd of Neligh for congress in this district the republicans are extremely fortunate. He will make an ideal candidate. Fully equipped with a mentality of high order, a pleasing personality, and one whose life has been irreproachable, he unites all those qualifications in one whom men like to meet, think about and vote for. We predict for him an overwhelming plurality and a career in congress that shall please everyone of his constituents no matter what their political predilections may be.

Boyd Defeats McCarthy.

Wayne Democrat: At the congressional convention held at Fremont yesterday Judge J. F. Boyd was nominated for congressman on the first ballot, defeating Congressman McCarthy by a vote of two. The fight will now be between the two judges, Boyd and Graves, for Graves will surely be nominated by the democrats at Norfolk next Monday. This will put two men in running who are able, clean, progressive Nebraskans. The halls of congress have certainly been disgraced too long by men of McCarthy's stripe.

Boyd Won Easily.

Petersburg Index: Judge J. F. Boyd of Neligh was unanimously nominated for congress by the Third district republican convention at Fremont. McCarthy, the present incumbent, hardly knew that he was in the race. Wonder what Boyd will now do about the Norfolk asylum scandal.

Will be Elected.

Plainview News: Judge Boyd received hearty support from all parts of the district in the congressional convention. He conducted a good clean campaign, and will receive the active support of every true republican.

Pays to be Decent.

Howells Journal: Editor Huse of The Norfolk News has certainly gotten even for the sting of ingratitude given him by McCarthy. It pays to be decent. But for the shabby treatment of Huse McCarthy might today be the nominee of his party.

"Great Caesar."

Wisner Democrat: Mourning over the defeat for renomination, Postmaster Hubbard of Pender tearfully declares that his "heart is in the coffin there with Caesar." McCarthy to Caesar! What a fight! Great Caesar!

When people are good to a turkey or a boy, the turkey or boy should be suspicious. When a turkey is fed a good deal, Christmas or Thanksgiving threatens; when a boy is brought to town in a buggy, it is probably for the purpose of having a tooth pulled.
