War Over Land. Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 26.-To a polygamous marriage relation between himself and a squaw of his tribe a Winnebago Indian named Prosper Amell traces his claim to a forty-acre tract of land in Thurston county. His right to hold the property is disputed by Clarence Fisher, who is the son of the woman by a former husband, John Fisher. Between the two redskin claimants for the land a controversy exists as to whether or not Amell and the mother of Fisher were ever actually married to one another. It has been taken to the supreme court for settlement, having been appealed by Fisher, who was defeated in the district court. The squaw in the case has been dead since 1880. In her lifetime she rejoiced in the name of Chump-ste-kaerae-win-kaw. No other person is now living who could with authority corroborate or contradict the facts as stated by Amell. These are, briefly, that he married her in 1876 or 1877, after she had separated from her first husband, and that a son was born to them in 1879. The child was named Peter Baptiste Amell, and is said to West Point at noon where she has their headquarters at Blair. H. have been recognized as progeny of Holmes of Plainview has taken charge Prosper Amell and Chump-ste-kae-raewin-kaw among the members of the tribe. The land now in controversy was alloted to the infant by the government, and Amell picked it out for him, Peter Baptiste died in 1898, before reaching his majority, and Amell declares that he is the only heir surviving to the young man.

As the facts are set forth by Amell in his petition, the marriage between subject to the laws of Nebraska or the United States government domestic relations, so that there is no civil record to show whether or not the mar- you, on the ground of non-support; wife. Peter Baptiste, says Fisher, was always considered and treated as a member of the Fisher family, which the defendant says he was in fact. This being the case, Fisher thinks the land is his as the next of kin.

Amell some time ago wanted to sell the land, but on consulting the record he found that Fisher had a claim en-MADISON WILL PLAY LOCALS tered for it. The paving brick would be 4x4x8 while the vitrified brick is 2x5x8, stood on edge. If a majority of property owners express a desire for some other kind of paving, that desire would be honored, but if no preference is expressed, the council could use its discretion. The petition does not ask for this type of paving, but this is the one contemplated.

The Cost.

It would cost a 25-foot lot on Norfolk avenue not more than $140, and True Source of Acting.

Eugene Moore, who appears here at the Auditorium October 18 in Alexander Dumas' romantic drama, "Monte Cristo," talked before the club of lit-
