There Has Been Very Little Doing in a Social Way During the Past Week in Norfolk, Because of the Necessary Holiday Preparations.

It will be a merry Christmas in the true sense of the word so far as Norfolk is concerned, judging from the festive family dinners that have been planned for the day. So filled with the Yuletide spirit has the past week been that there has been little doing in a social way. Santa Claus has secured a corner on everybody's time, and the monopoly has been worked for all it was worth. FARM LOAN COMPANIES.

Among the industries which are adding to the prestige of Norfolk as a financial center, and which are tending to induce immigration into the new northwest, are the farm loan companies of this city. The Durland Trust company and W. J. Gow & Bro. have been building up this line of business for years and much good, not only to Norfolk but to this whole section as far up as the end of the Rosebud reservation, has resulted.

The farm loan companies act as mediums between the farmers and the eastern capitalists in getting money from the east upon farms in northern Nebraska and southern South Dakota as securities.

Through the agency of these concerns the farmers of the northwest are enabled to get money at the lowest possible rate of interest—at even a lower rate than is secured for the farmers of northern Iowa and southern Minnesota. The loan companies in Norfolk have succeeded in proving to the east that the farm lands of this section are the highest type of security, next to government bonds themselves, since no loss or foreclosure has been recorded. And on the other hand, by making it possible to secure loans at low rates, the companies have induced outsiders to invest their money in farm lands around here, where they can borrow money so reasonably, and thus immigration has been greatly aided. Farm improvements that would not otherwise have been made, have resulted through the fact that money could be borrowed inexpensively with which to make these improvements.

It has been demonstrated that, while railroad stocks fluctuate and while city properties often rise and fall according to various conditions, good farm securities remain as stable as the very gold itself, and for this reason, while call money in New York is drawing skyward rates of interest, the conservative capitalists are more willing to put their money on good substantial farm lands in the fertile west. As much of the money as is possible to fill the demand for loans is secured right around this portion of the country, as these chances afford good investments to local money. And while Wall street stocks and bonds sometimes find money clamoring to get into the game, the Norfolk loan companies say that they never have any trouble finding takers for their security-offers. One of the local companies announces that it has just secured from one of the large eastern insurance companies practically an unlimited amount of very low rate money to be placed on the farms of this whole territory.

The loan applications are focused into Norfolk by means of agents who are located out through the district, there being perhaps seventy agents in various towns representing the Norfolk companies. The territory covered extends clear up into the newly settled portion of the Rosebud reservation, upon whose quarter sections it is said loans as high as $1,500 are being secured.

A stream of people keeps coming into Norfolk the year round from all this territory in order to look after loans, regardless of the fact that there are local agents. There is almost every day in the year a farmer from some place or other, who has come in, perhaps with his family, to look personally after his loan. This is a help to Norfolk.

The result of this concentration of farm loan business in Norfolk is added prestige to the city as a financial center. The power of this magnet is felt all around this point, clear out to the west edge of Nebraska on the main line of the Northwestern, into another state on the north and for many miles in all directions. It keeps the interest of substantial people centered on Norfolk constantly.

One of the local companies negotiated more than a half million of dollars in business during the past year alone. One has negotiated more than a million and a half since its twenty-six years of operation. At times the deposits in Norfolk banks, due to these companies, is said to be a very considerable portion of the total deposits. The loans of from $200 to $1,000, running for five years at 5 and 5 1/2 percent interest are desired by many who have small amounts that they wish to place on long time investments with safe securities.

All in all the farm loan companies, besides maintaining offices, renting buildings and giving employment to many here in the city, are constructive factors in Norfolk's upbuilding, in the very broadest sense of the term. And several hundred farms constantly feel the benefit to them.

What would be nicer for a just Christmas gift than 100 approved Norfolk farm securities?

TO REPLACE YARD AT ONCE

EDWARDS & BRADFORD WILL BEGIN BUILDING IMMEDIATELY.

FIRE LOSS IS FULLY INSURED

H. H. Jarvis, Secretary of the Edwards & Bradford Lumber Company, Arrived in Norfolk and Announced Plans—Lumber Now on the Way.

The Edwards & Bradford Lumber company will rebuild their yard in Norfolk immediately. Work will probably begin next Wednesday. Lumber was telegraphed for last night and is already on the way to replace the burned stock. The loss was about $25,000, covered by $20,000 insurance. Adjustment of the loss will be made on Wednesday. The lumber company feels fortunate in many respects regarding the fire, particularly on account of the very full insurance and also because the loss occurred at a season of the year when the lumber business is considered rather dull. The company has always considered the Norfolk yard as an especially hazardous risk, because all of the stock was under one roof and they thought that if a fire ever did start there would be little hope of saving the yard.

This was the statement of H. H. Jarvis of Sioux City, secretary of the Edwards & Bradford Lumber company, who arrived at 11 o'clock to look over the lumber yard ashes. He returned to Sioux City on the afternoon train.

Mr. Jarvis said: "Norfolk was one of the pioneer points in which our company established lumber yards twenty-five years ago. It was about the fourth town selected. We would not think of relinquishing our business here and Mr. Bradford telegraphed for lumber as soon as he heard of the fire. We do not carry our own insurance. This is the third fire we have had in twenty-five years, and we have thirty-five other yards. We feel fortunate in many respects over the fire, particularly over our very full insurance. We have no idea as to the origin of the blaze."

Books and records of the company were saved by John Ballantyne who broke in the door of the office.

LUMBER YARD IS DESTROYED

Fire Sweeps Clean Yard of Edwards & Bradford Here.

Fire practically destroyed the lumber yards of the Edwards & Bradford Lumber company in Norfolk Friday night. The loss was estimated at $20,000, well insured. The origin of the fire is a complete mystery. It was very early in the evening, at about 6:30 o'clock, that flames were discovered shooting up from the north end of the main lumber shed. All in a moment, apparently, the blaze swept over the entire yard and, whipped by a fierce northwest wind, was a mighty fire before even the alarm could be turned in. All night long and all day Saturday the fire department kept up its work of preventing a spread of the flames, though a vacant house at the southwest corner of the yard was partially burned and several houses south across the street were severely scorched and were in constant danger of igniting.

It was one of the most spectacular fires ever seen in Norfolk and not only the entire city, but the whole countryside around this point was brilliantly illuminated from the reflection on the clouds. So bright was the light that people at Hadar, five miles north, clearly watched the progress of the flame and some people from that point caught an incoming freight train in order to get a closer view of the disaster.

Although the Oxnard hotel stands but a few yards to the north of the burned yard, it was in no time endangered because of the strong wind that kept the flames going south.

Fire Department Responds. One of the first, and perhaps the first person to see the fire was Myron Farley, a member of the Queen City Hose company, who had just been called to the telephone in the Norfolk House, near the lumber yard. Looking out through the window, he discovered a high fountain of fire shooting up from the northwest corner of the main lumber shed. He cut short his telephone call and sent in the alarm to the pumping station. A little later the firebell rang and very shortly afterward the Mast Hose company, the Queen City Hose company and the Pioneer Hook and Ladder company were on the ground and two streams of water were put on the blaze. A little later Chief McCune called for the West Side Hose company and the Junction Hose company, which added two lines of hose. And shortly after that the Insane Hospital fire department, headed by Dr. G. A. Young, superintendent of the institution, came driving to town behind two big grey horses, and went vigorously to work in assisting to check the fire's spread. This made five streams of water besides the hook and ladder brigade which were kept constantly at work on the burning yard.

Origin a Mystery. Mr. E. Boas, manager of the lumber yard, said there was no indication as to the origin of the fire. The same seems to be the case with the other two fires which occurred here. There was no indication as to the origin of the fire, which was in progress when the fire was in progress.

where the fire started there was no inflammable material.

Mr. Boas telephoned to Mr. Jarvis, one of the officers of the company, who said he would arrive in Norfolk on the first train. Mr. Boas also telephoned to Mr. Bradford of Sioux City, one of the firm, who said that the property was fully insured.

Out of the fire were saved the office of the institution, at the northeast corner of the grounds, which was protected much by the wind, and a portion at the north end of the coal, which had been stored in a shed at the east edge of the yards, a half block long.

Great Work by Fire Boys.

The Norfolk fire department once again demonstrated their really remarkable ability to fight flame. With unlimited personal sacrifice, and at considerable risk, they took up the task of checking that lumber yard fire just as if their very lives depended upon it—and they did all that human power could do in checking a spread. Like warriors they fought the flames, marching right up into the very claws of the fire, and shooting strong streams of water which slowly but surely won the fight, and when the fire had been extinguished there remained a large mound of unburned coal, many bunches of scorched but unburned lumber, an office and houses on all sides of the yards to tell the story of the fire department's effective work.

Chief McCune and his assistants, John Krantz and Charles Pilger, forged into the burning yard and directed with admirable deliberation and judgment the efforts of the fire ladders. At times a fire company could be seen silhouetted against the sheet of flame, standing on a perilous pile of coal or burning lumber, and without regard to personal risk or sacrifice, centering a line of hose into some particularly perilous corner of the burning mass.

Many of the firemen stayed all night long, facing the cold north wind, and dozens of them utterly ruined their clothing from head to foot. They did it all, however, without a single murmur. "That," said a bystander, "is heroism."

Stayed at the Game All Night.

The Mast Hose company stayed at the fire fighting game all through the night, quenching new flames that broke occasionally, and the West Side Hose company remained pretty nearly all night long. When morning dawned the Queen City Hose company and the Hook and Ladder department were called to relieve the weary workers, and their attention was needed for the greater portion of the day.

Garden Hose Effective.

At the home of M. R. Green, south across the street from the burning yard, a garden hose proved effective in keeping the house from burning. The intense heat that swept across the street made the siding smoke and a number of bystanders attached a small hose to the kitchen hydrant, climbed to the roof and cooled off the building. The home of W. G. Berner, also south across the street, became very warm and was in constant danger.

There no doubt would have been live electric wires flying around in the air but for caution on the part of firemen. Poles near the yard were badly scorched and would probably have snapped off but for streams of water that bathed them now and then. An enormous crowd of people gathered to watch the fire and remained for several hours with chattering teeth.

Alarm Starts Runaway.

The fire alarm caused a fierce runaway which resulted in no damage. The delivery team of Anthes & Smith became frightened at the noise and excitement and dashed up Norfolk avenue at a rapid gait, but after circling about several blocks were headed off in an alley behind the store.

Second Lumber Fire.

The burning of the Edwards & Bradford yards made the second serious lumber yard fires in Norfolk within less than a year, and under very similar circumstances. Last winter, on a very much colder and equally windy night, but along toward midnight, fire was discovered at the north end of the Chicago Lumber yards. The gale and fire put up a stiff fight against the firemen but the department won and saved most of the stock. The sheds in that yard were covered with iron, which prevented the spread, while the roofs over the Edwards & Bradford sheds were of frame and were quickly eaten up.

A meeting of the Queen City Hose company, scheduled for Friday night, was postponed till next Friday night on account of the fire.

The lumber company sent all firemen to the Eagle restaurant after the blaze had been brought under control, to enjoy a supper.

BUSINESS MEN SHOVEL COAL.

H. A. Pasewalk and George Beels Helped Out in Time of Fire. Gus Graul, engineer at the city pumping station, was kept keyed up to a high tension for twenty-four hours on account of the lumber yard fire. For a full day the pumps were kept going at full clip and to keep boiler fires with which to supply steam for the pump, Mr. Graul had assistance of three Norfolk men who took off their coats and shoveled in coal just as though they were working for wages. The personages who thus got down to manual labor to keep the pumps going were no less than H. A. Pasewalk, president of the Norfolk Industrial company, George N. Beels, metaphysician, and Ed Lamb. These three men came to the rescue of the pumping station engineer and fired the boilers for many hours while the fire was in progress.

The city standpipe, 120 feet high and with a capacity of 3,743 barrels, was pumped full and emptied six times in order to fight the flames, and between 16,000 and 18,000 barrels of water were poured into the fire by the fire department. Never in Norfolk's history was there better pressure than at that fire, this being maintained at eighty-five pounds most of the night, with seventy pounds when there were five streams of water turned on.

It requires three hours and twenty minutes to fill the standpipe, and the pumps were kept going from 7 o'clock Friday night, when the fire broke out, until 1 o'clock Saturday, to keep up with the demands for pressure and moisture.

M. ENDRES DEFENDS CURB

SAYS IS NO FAULT WITH WORK OR MATERIAL. WANTS TO BE FAIR ABOUT IT

Mr. Endres Expresses a Willingness to Remedy Any Fault That Can be Found With the New Gutter or Curb, Due to His Work or Cement.

M. Endres, contractor who built the cement gutter and curb, had this to say with regard to action taken by the city council to inspect the gutter, and with regard to a discussion at the council meeting regarding alleged defects in the curb:

"If there is any crumbling in the curb or gutter it must not be on account of bad work or bad material for the city council had a special representative on the ground at all times so that the work be done according to contract, but the city council neglected their duty when they allowed horses to stand in the gutter and on the curb all day long before the cement had time to set. I haven't seen any crumbling as yet and if there is any I will make it good if it is on account of bad work or material."

The discussion over the curb arose before the city council when W. A. Emery and Mr. Graves, owners of buildings on Norfolk avenue, appeared and filed written objections to paying their assessment for the curbing, claiming that the curb was not according to contract. They claimed that the curb should have been six inches wide and sixteen inches deep according to specifications, but that it was not built in this dimension. They said they were ready to pay their share for the guttering.

The city council has already paid Mr. Endres for the work and the complaint arose when the city council wanted to collect from property owners for their shares.

It is claimed, in answer to the statement that the city council neglected its duty by allowing teams on the gutter, that the contract called for protection of the gutter by the builder until it had properly set.

CHRISTMAS FOR INSANE

FIRST DANCE SINCE NEW HOSPITAL WAS BUILT.

A TREAT IN EARLY MORNING

A Christmas Tree for the Poor Unfortunates in the State Hospital for the Insane in Norfolk Brings Thoughts of Home Too Vividly.

Patients in the Norfolk hospital for the insane will enjoy just as merry a Christmas day as it is possible to give them, without so overdoing the festivities of the occasion as to cause gloom and pathetic thoughts of homes. Dr. G. A. Young, superintendent, announces that on Christmas eve the first dance that has been given at the institution since the old hospital burned, will be held in the chapel. This has become possible by reason of the fact that patients have been transferred into the new west wing, releasing the chapel from its dormitory capacity.

In remodeling and preparing the building for a chapel again, a new finish will be put on the floor and new decorations on the walls. The carpenters will be stopped long enough in their work, however, to allow the patients to enjoy a dance on Christmas eve, with a dance following for the employes. A four-piece orchestra, consisting of a clarinet, cornet, violin and piano now makes good music.

Treats for Patients. Dr. Young says that, while it has been found that a Christmas tree does not pay in the hospital because it hurts the feelings of inmates in bringing back to their minds thoughts of their own homes that they have left, each patient will be given a treat on Christmas morning. Fruit, nuts and candies have been ordered and on Christmas morning, when the rest of the world is joyous in the Santa Claus spirit, the unfortunates in the hospital will receive, each one, a package of these good things to help make them happy and light hearted.

At dinner there will be turkey and other delicacies in keeping with the occasion.
