

MANY TEACHERS ARE HERE

MORE THAN USUAL NUMBER SO EARLY IN WEEK.

OFFICERS EXPECT NEAR 500

Senator Dolliver of Iowa Will Arrive in the City Thursday Noon—Headquarters of Association are Established at Oxnard Hotel.

(From Wednesday's Daily.)

North Nebraska teachers were again made welcome in Norfolk today, when the North Nebraska Teachers' association convened in the city Wednesday afternoon for the three days meeting. It is the first annual meeting of the association and the fourteenth session that has been held in Norfolk. The teachers are coming to Norfolk unusually early, the indications pointing to an attendance of half a thousand teachers by Thursday.

The first general session of the association was held at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the auditorium of the Methodist church. With the larger attendance of Thursday and Friday the general sessions of the teachers will be held in the Norfolk auditorium.

Teachers began to arrive on the Tuesday evening trains. By Wednesday morning the number of teachers in the city was greatly augmented by early morning arrivals. When the noon trains reached Norfolk several hundred teachers were in the city ready to take up the work of the association. The capacity of the hotels was early taxed but private homes in Norfolk were thrown open to the visitors and Norfolk teachers assisted in placing the city's guests in pleasant surroundings.

President Frank S. Perdue of Madison, Vice-President F. C. Marshall of Center, Secretary Rachel Fairchild of Spencer, officers of the teachers' association, were in Norfolk by Wednesday morning. Treasurer A. V. Teed of Ponca arrived at noon. The officers were surprised at the number of teachers already in the city. President Perdue said that everything united to make for the success of this year's meeting and thought that the attendance would approach the half thousand mark.

The officers have established their headquarters at the Oxnard hotel. Registration of the teachers is held at the hotel and at the Methodist church. A committee representing the Norfolk teachers is at the Methodist church to assign rooms about the city to all teachers who may desire them. Norfolk teachers are also meeting the incoming trains and have constituted themselves a reception committee to welcome the visitors.

Senator Dolliver of Iowa, who occupies a place on Thursday's program, is expected to reach Norfolk Thursday noon. State Superintendent McBrien is expected up from Lincoln Wednesday evening. Other prominent educators of Nebraska will also be in attendance at the meeting. Prof. Snodgrass of the Kearney normal will be in Norfolk in the interests of the state reading circle board.

(From Thursday's Daily.) The first day's enrollment in the North Nebraska Teachers' association surprised even the officers. By the close of Wednesday afternoon 216 teachers had registered in the association. Thursday's registration is expected to reach the half thousand mark and by Friday the half thousand mark and by Friday it is thought that Treasurer A. V. Teed's record will show a new mark in attendance.

The more limited territory now embraced in the north Nebraska association is sending as many teachers to Norfolk as formerly came in the days when several additional counties were included in the association now in session in the city. The increasing attendance this year is said to be due in part to the natural advancement of the organization and in part to the energetic course of President Perdue in bringing the meeting prominently before the teachers of the district. Never before has so much general interest in the association been worked up and never before has the western counties been so well represented in the annual meeting.

Thursday brought an April day with March winds to the teachers association. The second day of the meeting found the north Nebraska teachers well organized for the sessions. Wednesday evening and Thursday morning trains greatly augmented the number of teachers in Norfolk. All received a hearty welcome in the city. The high school students, whose streamers lent an additional touch of color to Norfolk avenue Wednesday, are gone, but Thursday added some 200 more teachers to the city's guests.

The first general session of the association was held Wednesday afternoon in the Methodist church auditorium, the number of teachers present surpassing the usual first day attendance. The general session Thursday and Friday morning occur in the Norfolk Auditorium. The twenty-first annual meeting of the North Nebraska Teachers' association was opened by Rev. J. L. Yallow invoking the divine blessing on the visiting teachers.

Superintendent Harry Hooper of Oakdale read the first paper presented to the association. Discussing means of increasing high school attendance, Mr. Hooper advocated class organizations that give a sense of responsibility to the students, good laboratory facilities that hold the interest of the students in their work, eighth grade teachers minded to interest their pupils in the advanced work and above all a superintendent or principal able to feel and show a personal interest in each pupil. In discussion Miss Florence Donelson of Norfolk urged that it fell upon both grade and high school teacher to overcome indifferent influences of home and street.

The place of the sciences in inculcating living truth was urged by Robert Thomson of Randolph in a paper on "Nature Study." H. H. Hickman of Wausa said that the real aims of nature study should be to show not material things but the immaterial thought of God behind all nature. Miss Mae Beck wanted nature study to be given a practical bend. It should not be taught, she said, under the name of nature study but should be used in connection with other studies to lead new interest to the subjects.

Discussing the arguments for and against the use of written work, O. R. Bowen of Pierce urged that such work taught rhetorical form and neatness, encouraged concentration and threw children on their own resources. The place for written work, he said, was in examinations, in note books and occasionally in recitations. William Finnegan of Hartington maintained that half the written work now done would yield three times the present results if done "twice as carefully" and "twice as prayerfully."

Hope to Return Here. Thursday evening Senator Dolliver lectures in the Norfolk Auditorium before the association. Friday's program will also be one of unusual interest including the business session late in the forenoon at the Auditorium. In the election of officers Vice President F. C. Marshall of Center is being discussed as a successor to President Perdue. The place of next year's meeting will come up Friday morning. Nearly all sentiment favors Norfolk. With the growth of the association Norfolk is about the only city in the district that can handle the meeting. The executive committee is expected to report a new constitution Friday morning.

out of the heat of the campaign and would enter his new office untrammelled by campaign promises. "I have kept free from election promises," said Mr. Durland to The News, "and have not committed myself on matters touching the city government. Appointments will be announced at the proper time to the city council." Mr. Durland said that a city administration was largely judged by the acts of the city employees named by the mayor. Mr. Durland is committed to no particular appointments at this time but says that he will make the appointments with a view of having the general course of the administration meet with the approval of the citizens of Norfolk.

The successful candidates at Tuesday's election will take up their new city offices on May 7, when the municipal year begins. The change in the city government which will occur on that date will give Norfolk a new mayor, a new police judge, and four new councilmen. Members of the board of education elected will take their seats at the board meeting on May 6. Both the present city and school administrations have another month's lease of life.
